Council Deadlocked On Sewage Plant Issue

DEFERS ACTION ON HUNTER'S 2 PROPOSALS

3 Republicans and Democrat Line Up Against Hiring Of Turner, Technician.

HEATED CAUCUS SESSION

Ordinances Read First Time, Due to Come Up Again At Special Meeting.

Deadlocked with Mayor Claude M. Hunter over his plan for supervision of the municipal sewage plant, city council deferred action last night on ordinances providing for the employment of a sewage plant staff and technician after the present law expires March 8.

Council gave the three measures that are involved in the controversy a first reading and delayed any immediate vote. It is expected that they will come up again at a special session next week.

Given Formal Reading.

The ordinances were given a formal reading without any comment being made although prior to the meeting council debated the proposals at a heated caucus session in which three Republicans and one Democrat lined up against the mayor's plans.

Four other Democratic members indicated by their attitude that they were in favor of "going along" with the mayor on his appointment of a sewage plant superintendent without previous experience at a salary of $2,500 a year, and the hiring of a technical supervisor on a part-time basis at $1,500 a year.

Second Ward Councilman C. N. Shultz, Republican, proposed that the measures be given a first reading to allow "more time for consideration."

Creates Plant Jobs.

The three measures include the ordinance creating the positions and fixing the salaries of employes at the plant; another authorizes the service director to rehire James Collier, of Elyria, as technician on a part time basis at $125 a month, while the third calls for the transfer of $1,500 to pay Collier's salary for the year.

Mayor Hunter opened the caucus by explaining his appointment of J. R. Turner as the new head of the sewage plant to succeed J. P. Sotherland who resigned at the mayor's request Feb. 5.

He told of Turner's experience in the engineering field and said that he had the approval of the state board of health whom he had consulted before making the appointment.

Pointing out that Sotherland had been hired last year by council under protest from the state board, the mayor said he had been forced to do what the former administration should have done.

"The former administration was notified by the state health board to replace Sotherland, but it was so near the end of their terms that they left the job for me," Hunter declared.

Asked why he had re-appointed Sotherland, Hunter said, "that was the only thing I could do at the time." He pointed out that he planned to keep the former superintendent on the job until the existing ordinance creating the positions came to council for renewal, but that he had been forced to replace Sotherland "at once" on recommendations from the state board and consulting and technical engineers.

Warns Against Outsider.

"I did the best I could. I am not trying to shove anything down council's throat, but I want you boys to know the complete picture."

Hunter warned against bringing in outside help and the fact that an experienced engineer might cost a great deal more than the $4,000 that would be necessary to pay the present superintendent and a technician.

Fred Miller, Third ward councilman, answered the mayor

"I will admit that we made a mistake a year ago in placing an inexperienced man in charge of the plant, so why do the same thing again? I am opposed to the hiring of an inexperienced engi-

Work 7 Hours Then Reveal Safe-Cracking

Police Delay Report on Burglary; Jobless Youth Jailed as Suspect.

A safe-cracking at the Lindeman and Almy printery, 66 North Diamond street, was revealed at 2 p. m. yesterday after police had worked "silently" on the case for nearly seven hours with meager success—at least according to the report that was filed.

A 21-year-old unemployed man is being held in jail for investigation, however, although he has not been questioned as yet.

While the report filed by detectives said that "the complainant did not know how much money was missing from the safe" a News-Journal reporter was told by C. W. Lindeman, one of the proprietors of the shop, that $11 in bills and change had been taken and an undetermined amount of sales tax money was missing.

Safe Unlocked.

It was also learned that the "amateur cracksman" had knocked the combination off the unlocked safe to gain entrance to the strong box on the inside. The box, looted of its contents, was left lying on the floor.

The burglar apparently had gained entrance to the office between 5:30 p. m. and 6:30 p. m. Thursday by breaking the glass in a basement door and going through the basement to the second floor, and then left through a side door on Dickson street, which was left unlocked.

Lindeman reported that he had closed his shop at 5:30 p. m. Thursday and at 6:30 p. m. received a telephone call from a tenant in the basement that the glass in his office door was broken. He said he thought little about it, assuming that someone had thrown a rock through the glass. The next morning when he opened the shop at 7:30 a. m. he found the contents of the safe strewn about the floor.

Police Chief Meade K. Bates had assigned Lieut. C. J. Kalstein and Detectives E. C. Fuller and Harry Copper to the case. The report filed by Copper yesterday read: "Someone evidently entered by a basement door . . . going immediately to the safe which was setting by the door . . . knocked off the combination which was found seven feet from the safe towards the south wall under a stand . . . strong box had been knocked loose and was setting in middle of the floor 10 feet from the safe . . . papers were found scattered on a desk . . . the evidence was brought to the station and turned over to the finger print department for further investigation."

Meeting That Stirred Europe—What's Next?

WORLD WAITS FOR HITLER'S TALK TO REICH

'What Next?' Statesmen Wonder as Fuehrer Prepares For Message Tomorrow.

SECRECY PREVAILING

Nazi Chief's Closest Advisers Predicting Speech Will Relate to 'Peace.'

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—Three weeks of wild rumors of momentous changes in central Europe reach their climax, perhaps with a sign of fulfillment, when Reichfuehrer Hitler delivers his newest message to the world tomorrow.

The old familiar question "What will he do next?" echoed in all the chancellories and parliaments of Europe. But there was no official indication of what might be his plans or to what degree he proposed to reveal them.

His closest collaborators predicted it would be a "message of peace." But that was small comfort to anxious statesmen.

Recall 1936 Speech.

Hitler also talked of peace in that reichstag speech of March, 1936, in which he announced remilitarization of the Rhineland—and thereby made the Locarno security pact a dead issue.

There were both hopes and fears that he might state more precisely tomorrow his intentions in Czechoslovakia, where live some 3,000,000 pro-Nazi, Sudeten Germans, close to the border of Nazi Germany.

The propaganda ministry persuaded the official Czechoslovakian Broadcasting company to carry the reichstag speech throughout the Czech republic.

Many in political circles felt certain Hitler would demand autonomy for Sudeten Deutsch (South Germans), and the willingness to broadcast the speech was taken as an indication Czech Premier Hodza was willing to pay the price of autonomy to Germans in Czechoslovakia for peace with a powerful neighbor.

It was taken for granted he would picture the recent changes in Austria—the naming of five cabinet ministers favorable to Germany and the freeing of Nazi political prisoners—as a vital step toward European peace.

Expect Review of Talk.

He was expected to cite his talks last week with Austria's

BREATHE EASIER

Threatened Persons Relieved By Maniac Killer's Capture.

CHICAGO—(UP)—Police guards were withdrawn today from the homes of four persons threatened with death by Paul Harrison, insane hammer slayer and fugitive from the Illinois Security hospital at Menard, Ill.

He and Peter Florek, 22, who escaped from the hospital a week ago were captured late yesterday without resistance in a Mississippi river front lumber shed, less than a mile south of the hospital. Their hideaway was discovered by a deputy sheriff and a newspaperman.

Both convicts were suffering from exposure. Harrison's feet were frozen.

Guards were established at the homes of Harrison's former wife Margaret, two psychiatrists and a criminal court judge when Harrison escaped.

Slain Mother

A medicine bottle from which police obtained fingerprints provided a major clue today as police of Lorain continued their investigation of the murder of Mrs. Mary Wallace, 31, mother of four children who was beaten with a hammer and slashed with a butcher knife. Mrs. Wallace, shown above, was the wife of an Ohio penitentiary lifer sentenced for murder several years ago.

RENEWED HEAVY SPENDING SEEN

U. S. to Pour Out More Money If Present Funds Fail to Cure Business Ills.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Renewal of heavy governmental expenditures was seen by high fiscal advisers today as the administration's next move to bring about business recovery.

Should present federal aids to industry fail to restore any marked degree of prosperity, it is likely President Roosevelt will agree to further abandonment of economy objectives, according to the advisers.

In his pronouncement that commodity prices should be brought into better balance with each other Mr. Roosevelt yesterday promised the government's efforts would be directed toward increasing production.

He informed business the administration's goal is a "constantly increasing" national income to be accomplished through stepping up production and employment. The government's agricultural, industrial, housing, and monetary programs are being directed to this end, he explained.

For the time being, no renewal of so-called "pump-priming" expenditures will be resorted to by the treasury. The president hopes that relief spending, federal insurance of housing loans, expansion of bank credit, the new farm bill and resumption of lending by the RFC will afford the necessary stimulus to business.

If these fail to bring the desired result, officials feel certain a new expenditure program will be tried.

Bradley Assigned Escorts As Committee Hears He's Being 'Shadowed.'

GOVERNOR IN NEW BLAST

Asks to Have Accuser Quizzed By Own Attorney; Probers Study Documents.

BULLETIN

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Gov. Martin L. Davey told the Columbus dispatch by telephone today from East Cleveland that he had filed a perjury warrant in municipal court there against Lee Bradley, Cleveland asphalt salesman.

BULLETIN

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Governor Davey was invited by the special senate investigating committee today to appear before that group himself next Monday or Tuesday. But the committee did not accede to the governor's demand that his attorney be permitted to question Lee Bradley, Cleveland salesman and former Davey employe.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Closely guarded by two senate officers, Lee Bradley came before the senate graft investigating committee today to continue his role of star witness in the inquiry into Martin L. Davey's successful 1934 campaign for governor.

As Bradley left the hearing room last night, he was informed by Senator J. Ralph Seidner, committee chairman, that he was being "shadowed." The committee immediately ordered the officers to accompany Bradley on all trips between his hotel and the hearing room.

Presents Documents.

Bradley produced letters, telegrams, hotel memoranda and other documents to support his testimony that

1. Prior to the 1934 election he arranged with the General Motors corporation to contribute $25,000 to Davey's campaign, with the understanding that the firm would receive 50 per cent of the state's motor vehicle business if he were elected.

2. He arranged with General Motors to pay him a 10 to 35 per cent commission on each unit it sold to the state, and that he was to split his commissions 50-50 with the governor.

3. Before he collected any commissions, he was replaced by Francis W. Poulson, now state Democratic chairman, and was told by a General Motors representative that "Poulson is handling all of the funds."

NEW BUS HOURS

Council Grants Request For Change in Schedule.

A request of the Mansfield Rapid Transit company that it be permitted to operate its buses on the Park avenue-West Fourth street loop line on a half hour schedule except in rush hours, was granted by city council last night.

Councilman Russell Porch, chairman of the utilities committee which had the request under advisement since Jan. 14, said the committee found that the revenues did not justify the operation of the line on 15-minute intervals and recommended that the request be allowed.

The new schedule calls for 15-minute service from 5:15 a. m. until 8:15 a. m. and from 11:30 a. m. until 6:15 p. m. Between 8:15 a. m. and 11:30 a. m. and 6:15 p. m. and 11:00 p. m. buses will operate on a half-hour schedule.

OK'S CONTRACTS WITH HOSPITAL

Council Renews Agreements For Laboratory Work and Care for Indigents.

Two contracts with General hospital that expired last Dec. 31, one calling for laboratory work to be done for the health department and the other care for indigent patients, were renewed by city council last night.

The legislation in each case authorized Service-Safety Director Tracy C. Styert to enter into the contracts in behalf of the city.

The contracts for laboratory services calls for the payment of $115 a month by the city for regular milk analysis as ordered by the health commissioner and for weekly analysis of the city's water. In event of emergencies, tests are to be made as deemed necessary by the health commissioner.

Indigent care for which the city pays $4.25 daily per patient, includes all expenses for operations, room service, anesthetic medical supplies, nursing and x-rays.

Council in the annual appropriation bill set aside $14,000 for the purpose of hospital care for indigents, which is to include ambulance service and burials. During the past year the city spent $10,800 for hospital care alone for indigents and more than $3,000 for ambulance service and funerals.

Bates Locks Up Traffic Tag Records at Station

Says There's Explanation for Dismissals of Tickets But Won't Say What It Is.

Refusing to comment on the reason for dismissing four traffic tickets issued to one North Mulberry street firm, Police Chief Meade K. Bates ordered traffic ticket records "locked up" today and "muzzled" the 18-year-old girl collector of traffic bonds.

Stating that he knew "nothing about any tickets being excused" Bates ordered Miss Helen Baughman, 18-year-old clerk in the traffic department to put the records under lock and key, and to give no explanations to reporters. "If there is to be any explanation, it will come from me," Bates warned her.

When asked if there was an explanation, Bates said there was but added, "you're not going to get it." He said he wasn't interested in what the public might think about such procedure, and if they wanted the information they could come to the station and get it.

70 Dismissals Since Jan. 1.

While it was declared by officers that the "no discrimination policy" still existed in the payments of traffic tickets, a survey showed that approximately 70 "tags" had been dismissed since Jan. 1, four of which had been issued to the same firm.

While the bulk of the tickets had been excused to out-of-town motorists as a department contest, the records showed that Bates personally had excused more than half a dozen.

It was also disclosed that approximately 50 tickets which were issued last month to the officers had not been turned in, although several issues had been made to them since.

Approximately 800 have been given motorists and paid since the first of the year.

Bates' only comment about the unusual amount of tags issued this month, was "we have to pay for some more policemen."

They are Louise Rosenblue, 16, 54 Augustine avenue, a student at Madison township high school; and Alice Rhodes, 16, 87 Bartley avenue, a student at senior high school.

Ernest Southerland, Ashland road, a Madison township high school student, confined with the disease for the past two weeks, was released from quarantine today, Rehder announced.

Freddie Gets Permission to Remove Parents From Payroll

(By United Press)

HOLLYWOOD—Freddie Bartholomew, the 13-year-old boy who earns $98,000 a year and gets only $1 a week to spend, had a court's permission today to cut his parents' names off his personal payroll for a year, so that an effort may be made to balance his budget.

Lawyers for the boy and his guardian aunt, Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, informed Judge Clement D. Nye that Freddie was $96,800 in debt and had only $18,000 in the bank. The reason, the lawyer said, was that the little actor had too many dependents.

Lawyers for the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Bartholomew of London, England, were there to protest, but Judge Nye agreed that something must be done about the boy's finances.

For the past two years, since the aunt won a legal battle with the parents for custody of Freddie whom she had reared, 20 per cent of the boy's movie salary has been sent to London as a contribution to the family. Part of the money went to the parents, and part to Freddie's sisters who are in an European convent at his expense.

The boy's petition to the court explained that he owed $15,000 to his lawyer; $5,000 to his agent; $67,000 to the federal and state income tax collectors, and various other sums amounting to a total of $96,800. That amount was $78,000 more than he had in the bank and he was in fact, insolvent.

No Kisses, No Caresses, Says MacFadden In Alienation Suit

(By United Press)

NEW YORK—A jury in New York supreme court had under advisement today a $100,000 alienation of affections suit brought against Bernard MacFadden, publisher and physical culturist, by Sofir C. Adams, Danvers, Mass., baker.

A sealed verdict will be handed up to Justice Salvatore A. Cotillo Monday morning.

Adams charged that he lost his wife's love when she went to work as a nurse in the MacFadden offices. He said that he baked as he never baked before, but that even his sugar-coated cookies could not win her back.

MacFadden was the final witness. He denied categorically each section of Adams' complaint.

"Did you ever have any intimate relations with Mrs. Abbie Rhemhardt Adams?" his attorney asked.

"I did not" the publisher replied.

"Did you ever kiss her or caress her or show other affections?"

"I did not."

"Did you ever feel her muscle?"

"I did not."

MacFadden denied that he had held the Joplin, Mo., masseuse on his lap.

Justice Cotillo interrupted.

"How old are you, Mr. MacFadden, if you don't mind?" he asked.

"I'm in my 70th year."

He admitted that he gave Mrs. Adams a $500 check when she left his employ, but said that it was a loan. He felt sorry for her, he said, and wanted to help her get a start in the restaurant business.

Medicine Bottle Clue In Hammer Murder at Lorain

POLICE CHECK FINGERPRINTS, HUNT 'DRIFTER'

Neighbors Tell Of Seeing Man At Woman's Cottage During Morning Of Slaying.

(By Associated Press)

LORAIN—Tangled bed clothes in the room where Mrs. Mary Wallace, 31, was found slain yielded a medicine bottle, Police Inspector George Knapp said today, on which was a "fairly good" set of male fingerprints.

Examination of the handles of a hammer and butcher knife, with which her assailant beat and slashed the mother of four children Thursday, disclosed no tangible clews immediately, Knapp said.

Police Chief Theodore Walker said descriptions of a powerfully built man neighbors saw leave the Wallace home the day of the slaying tallied with a photograph of a man relatives described as a former admirer of the victim.

Seen In Morning.

Neighbors told investigators, Walker said, that the man left the cottage on Lorain's outskirts between 9:30 and 10 a. m. Coroner S. C. Ward, in returning a murder verdict, fixed the time of death at before noon.

Officers said relatives claimed Mrs. Wallace moved from another house to "get rid" of the man. Daniel Mann, 19, identified the photograph as that of a man who several weeks ago asked him where Mrs. Wallace lived.

John Boskey, brother-in-law of Mrs. Wallace, told investigators the man telephoner him Thursday and said he was going "to see the Wallace children."

Police said the man was known to them as a "drifter" who had slept in central station's transient quarters several times.

Arthur Wallace, the victim's husband, who is serving a life term in Ohio penitentiary for participation in a murder seven years ago, told Warden James C. Woodard he had "no idea" who killed his wife. Police expect Wallace to be brought here for his wife's funeral services tomorrow.

A Farmer's Diary

Feb. 18.

DRIP, drip! All day we have heard the steady rhythmic patter of the rain. Our nine-mile westward view is shortened to a mere half-mile. From out the back curtain of gray fog, occasional heavy showers dash their way, add their swinging, tapping deluge to that of the dancing drops already here, and depart, leaving new puddles in the drive.

Drip, drip! The red roof of our neighbor's gray stone house is the only gay color in our immediate landscape. The blotches of evergreen plantings are the darkest accent in our window picture. But the grass—the grass is glad for the rain! It puts on a greener tinge with every passing shower. The grapevine on the lattice by the back door wears diamond droplets on the end of every twig. The iris pushes delicate green shoots up through its mulch of brown.

Drip, drip! The crows are flapping through the fog above the woods, calling to each other, and to the world, that it won't be long now. The sparrows twitter in the pear tree, exchanging gossip about the dampness of the day. The sweet fresh odor of the moistened earth is everywhere.

Drip, drip! Down through the field, a little rill makes its way—tiny at first, then larger. It carries particles of the rich top soil. It joins with other rivulets and romps down through my neighbor's field, a dirty, racing, impudent roistering stream, that is carrying off the fertile field, inch by inch. Stop it, someday, before the goodness of the soil is washed away! Hold it fast, farmer, with cover crops; guide it into ditches!

Drip, drip! The spring rains are here.—By C. A. B.

Last Civil War Veteran at Galion Has 93rd Birthday

GALION—Galion's last surviving Civil war veteran, and also the only survivor of the 26th O. V. I. out of 1,200 men, is Philip Metzger, who today is observing his 93rd birthday anniversary at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Grey Whitesell, here.

Metzger eagerly awaits the day's papers to read the world news. This is now his main occupation and he is able no longer to walk any great distance, and his hearing is impaired.

He lived through four major battles of the Civil war, and receives pensions from both the government and the Big Four Railroad company. He claims to have lived in Galion longer than any other citizen, coming here 88 years ago. He was born in Marion county, a few miles south of Marion, the son of William Metzger. He and his father fought side by side in Company E, 26th Ohio Infantry.

His marriage was to Rachel Traul of Galion who died a number of years ago. He has two children, Mrs. Grey Whitesell of Galion, and Chalmer Metzger of Waldbridge. There are four grandchildren and several great-grandchildren.

There will be no special observance of his birthday today.

SHELBY FIRM'S NEW BICYCLES GO STREAMLINE

'Chassis' Not 'Built For Two' As the Song Goes, Suggests Speed in Every Line.

It's been quite a spell since Daisy and her swain went for a ride on a bicycle built for two, as the old saying had it, but obviously that means of transportation has lost none of its appeal, for the Shelby Cycle company is planning a bigger and better year, with a smart, streamlined model soon to go into mass production.

They aren't building bicycles for two these days—probably another outcropping of women's independence—but the revived tendency toward bicycles in the last two or three years has lead to the development of a "chassis" that is a long, long, way from the first cycles.

Recall Early Models.

A few of the old-timers will recall the models that were popular about the time Grover Cleveland was an eligible bachelor president. There were two wheels, butt one was a little fella away down low, and the other looked like a miniature Ferris wheel which held the bicycle seat and rider away up there. To take a spill in those days was almost as serious as turning turtle in an auto.

The next development were two wheels of the same size and frequently they were built with tandem sats—an ideal opportunity to make love on the move, and inspiration of that sentimental classic: "And you'll look sweet upon the seat, of a bicycle built for two."

The new 1938 deluxe models suggest speed in every line, and when in motion give the impression of a Fourth of July pinwheel.

The neighboring manufacturing plant—one of the largest in the entire country, by the way—has orders from New York, Chicago, San Francisco and other metropolitan centers where bicycling is just as popular a sport as it is in the smaller cities and towns.

The 1938 model was designed by a Mansfield concern, the Morgan Advertising company, which worked in conjunction with engineers of the Shelby Cycle company. The lines are entirely new and open a new sales field.

The Shelby company employs about 400 workmen on a 24-hour day basis when the season is in full swing, and officials expect to be operating on a normal basis early this spring.

DENIES VENUE CHANGE IN SUIT

MT. GILEAD—An application for a change of venue in the trial of the suit of Maggie Hack Smith against Carrie Belle Shaw and others has been denied by Judge Clarence U Ahl of Crawford county who heard the application.

The suit was brought to set aside the will of the late Mrs. Caroline Hack of Westfield township and was filed in common pleas court here. Application for trying the case in some other county was made with the allegation that a fair and impartial jury could not be obtained here because of the circumstances surrounding Mrs. Hack's death. She was found murdered at her home last spring.

Judge Ahl stated that in his opinion even though all of the allegations of the application were granted as true, he felt that a fair trial could be held in Morrow county and denied the application. No date has been set for the trial.

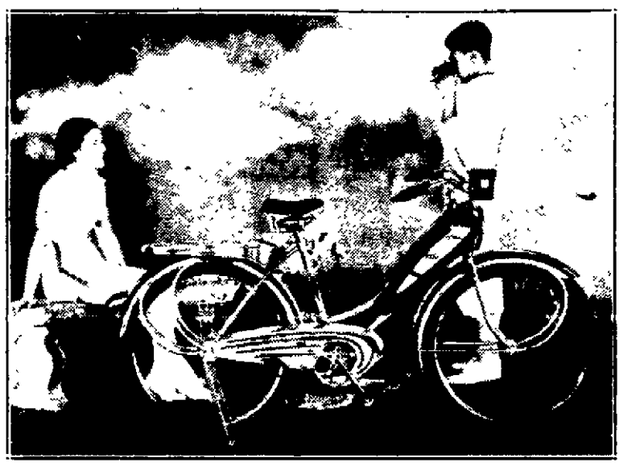
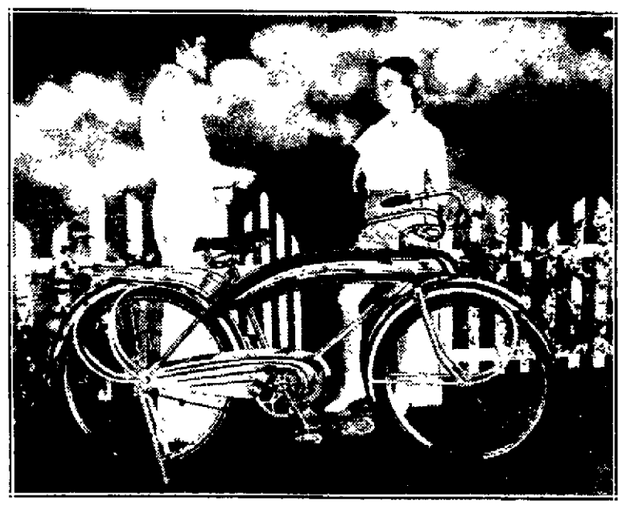
Newest of Streamlined Bikes



FOR HER

When gals of the gay 90's went for a spin through the park on their bicycles, they thought they had the last word in bicycle transportation, but look at te 1938 deluxe model, designed in Mansfield and manufactured by the Shelby Cycle company. It's as modern as a clipper plane. Discussing its new features are Valeria Fair and Glen Earl, both of Shelby.



FOR HIM

While they aren't manufacturing bicycles built for two these days, a swain still has every encouragement to take his girl for a ride for there are swanky models for "him" and for "her." The picture shows one of the 1938 bicycles for "him." Wishing for spring, warm weather and dry roads are Cloyce Milliron and Mrs. John Plank, also both of Shelby.

PROPOSAL FOR LEVY REPEAL HIT AT BUCYRUS

County, City School Heads Point to Potential Loss In Operating Revenues.

BUCYRUS — Adoption of the proposed amendment to the constitution of Ohio prohibiting the imposition of sales taxes would seriously hamper the operation of city and rural schools in Crawford county, according to a survey.

County Superintendent Glen C. West reported that rural schools would stand to lose $111,840 annually if the amendment should be adopted, which would mean that additional levies on real estate would be necessary to maintain the present standards.

Superintendent D. C. Baer of Bucyrus city schools said that passage of the amendment would leave city schools with only enough funds with which to operate four months out of 12, unless additional levies were added.

Three hundred and fifty thousand signers are necessary on the amendment to place the issue on the ballot.

ADAMICK CAN PUNCH, MOVE LIKE A SPEEDY MIDDLEWEIGHT

By DAVIS J. WALSH
(INS Sports Editor)

NEW YORK—He was pelted, belted, bashed, maimed and all but beheaded during the longest three minutes Jimmy Adamick ever again will live through. But at the close of a heartbreaking tenth and final round last night, they walked away from Harry Thomas and over to Adamick's corner, there to raise his hand in token of victory.

Adamick

He had just survived a round that, I'm convinced, would have wound up with Louis in a stupor and Schmeling in a trance. Only the old Dempsey could have taken a punching like that and stayed in there. Adamick did many things last night, including some that were wrong, but that heroic tenth round made believers out of most of us.

The decision was unanimous, but it didn't sit well with the strictly Class AA attendance of 7,000, which yowled in high derision and was all for calling out the militia or something. In fact, leaving Madison Square Garden, I heard one witness say to another: "Wouldn't it be funny if Adamick won the heavyweight championship?"

Personally, I think it would be very funny if he doesn't. An official forfeiture of the third round by Thomas for an alleged low punch was a vital factor in calling Adamick the winner, at least in my book. But it's also in my book that a few months from now, he'll be popping Thomases of this life with abandon. He showed last night that he can punch, move like a middleweight and take it as only Dempsey could. If he needs anything else, it must be a crowbar.

As a matter of fact, I'm beginning to wonder whether that wouldn't have been a good idea for both of them. Adamick, like Schmeling, was clipped right under the opening bell, took a brutal slathering in the third and seventh and, in the tenth, was almost batted for his intellect.

At four other points in the fight, Thomas was doing a Leon Errol into the ropes and, long before the end, the forehead over his right eye swelled alarmingly. It finally looked like the portico of a two-family house.

But there were no knockdowns. These blokes simply are tougher than a pair of half-soles.

* * *

THOMAS was much better this time than he was in the Schmeling fight and, in fact, good enough to have stolen the play last night, if Referee Arthur Donovan hadn't called a low punch in the third round. Thomas won that round from here to the horizon, but they gave it to the other guy on a technicality and so I wound up with a score of six rounds for Adamick to four for Thomas.

Barring the foul, though—which incidentally was not evident to me—my score would have been five to five and a decision to Thomas on the testimony of his great flash back through the tenth round. A few months hence, this pair won't even be in the same league, but it seemed that close last night, although not to two of the officials.

Ike Smith Stars as Mansfield High Cagers Close Season With Impressive Victory; Reserves Stopped.

By CHARLES MARTIN

MANSFIELD fans got a glimpse of the Indiana brand of basketball last night, but they were not greatly impressed.

If there is any difference between the Indiana and Ohio styles, the fair-sized crowd at Mansfield high school failed to see any evidence of it.

Yes, you have to score buckets in Indiana the same as you do in Ohio to win the court games.

LaGrange represented the basketball-minded state of Indiana, and Mansfield was the Buckeye state representatives. Mansfield won the game, and impressively too, the score being 39 to 32.

Ike Smith Stars.

Playing without the services of Johnny Hallabrin, who is ill, the Tygers, with little Ike Smith again playing a stellar role, presented a fine brand of ball as they toppled the Hoosiers to conclude their regular schedule with a record of 10 victories and six losses.

While this was the last game on the schedule, Coach Russ Murphy said today that it is likely that the Tygers will make at least one more appearance before the district tournament.

He said that there is still a possibility that the postponed Willard game will be played. If the game is cancelled, the Tygers may schedule a tilt with the Alumni club, he said.

With Smith, who replaced Hallabrin in the lineup, leading the way, Mansfield, after getting off to a slow start last night, came into its own to win going away.

The Lions of LaGrange gave the Tygers a real battle, but were unable to cope with Mansfield's fast-breaking attack.

After Mansfield opened the scoring on Smith's side shot, LaGrange found the range long enough to hop into a 5-2 lead, but the Tygers came right back to knot the score at 7-all and then go ahead, 9 to 7, as the period ended.

The Lions started clicking again soon after the opening of the second stanza, and after a nip-and-tuck scoring battle pushed ahead to take a 16 to 15 advantage at the half.

Mansfield's brilliant defense played an important role in the third chapter. The Tygers set the invaders down with six points and shot into the lead in quick order. As the quarter ended Mansfield led, 23 to 22.

And then LaGrange, fighting desperately to overtage the taller Mansfield club, broke loose in the early minutes of the final period to knot the score on two occasions, and then took a 26 to 25 lead.

Smith broke into the spotlight at this point and took care of the situation in no time. His first goal shoved the Tygers ahead, and then he gave them a larger lead with a free throw and another bucket. After that it was all over. The visitors tried hard to come back, but Mansfield's stalling during the final seconds kept them in check.

Scores 12 Points.

Smith was the offensive star of the evening, dropping in 12 points, while Jack Lyons trailed him with 10. Todd scored nine to top the losers.

The Elks club of the City Class A league defeated the Reserves, 25 to 13, in one of the preliminary games, to halt an 11-game winning streak, and the No. 2 Reserves walloped the Baptist, 22 to 14, in the other. Gene Brandon, former Mansfield high star, led the Elks with eight points. Patterson was high-point man for the No. 2 Reserves with nine.

LOOKS LIKE RING COMER

Adamick Shows Promise as He Defeats Thomas In New York.

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK—(AP)—A year from now, if he doesn't happen to have an accident like fighting Joe Louis or Max Schmeling in the meantime, young Jimmy Adamick is likely to be a very potent factor in the heavyweight ranks.

The local fistic fraternity, which was more than little skeptical of the Detroit boy, passed that verdict after watching him beat tough Harry Thomas by a fair margin in his eastern bow last night at the Garden.

Plenty of Heart.

Jimmy wasn't, of course, the man-eater he had been pictured by his well known sponsor, Jack Kearns. That was more than anybody expected. But he proved himself a good, tough scrapper, with a better than average left hook and plenty of heart.

Anyway, it turned out later in the dressing room that Kearns had been grievously misunderstood when he said Adamick was "better than Dempsey." Everybody thought he was referring to the Dempsey of Toledo, but the good doctor straightened that out.

"Now wait," he said. "Did you see Dempsey when he fought Willie Meehan? That's the Dempsey I was talking about. Jimmie's that good, if not better."

Associated Press scored seven rounds for Adamick and three for Thomas with Thomas dropping one heat because of a low blow. The decision of the three officials was unanimous.

The high spot of the meeting for the scanty crowd of 6,600 came in the closing round, when the battered Thomas, appearing ripe for a knockout, suddenly lashed out with a right that caught Adamick flush on the jaw and sent the overconfident youngster reeling.

Thomas poured on the leather, and the critics found that Adamick could take it. Thomas let him have both barrels, right on the old button, as the Detroit kid floundered about. But Jimmy weathered it and came back punching. Thomas kept the upper-hand right to the final bell, though, and his comeback had been so game that the decision was booed.

Hits Like Schmeling.

Thomas came out of it with an egg over his right eye and a conviction that Adamick can't hit in the same league with Schmeling.

RANDOM SHOTS

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

RICHLAND county's high school basketball tournament starts tonight at the point where it left off last year. Ontario and Madison collided in the finals last season, and they tangle in a first round game at the Tygers' home tonight. If this game, and the one between Lexington and Plymouth doesn't pack the Mansfield plant to the rafters, we'll be greatly surprised.

SCORES FIRST VICTORY

Perrysville Defeats Hayesville, 21-19, On Kiner's Basket.

PERRYSVILLE—The cagers of Perrysville high school chalked up their first victory of the season here last night as they defeated Hayesville, 21 to 19, in an overtime game. Don Kiner provided the margin of victory with a basket in the overtime.

Perrysville led 8-7 in the first period and trailed 10-9 at the half and 13-10 at the end of the third quarter.

MEET IN FINALS TODAY

ORLANDO, Fla.—(INS)—Marion Miley of Ft. Pierce, Fla., and Lexington, Ky., and Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago, meet today in the finals of the annual mid-Florida women's golf championship.

We admit Everett Marshall—is he champion?—took quite a beating in his rassle bout in Cleveland with Ernie Dusek, the dirty one of the Dusek family, for Everett is out there among the daisies, or chairs, in the photo above, but take a look at the referee, Bull Weideman, who has worked many matches in Mansfield. The boys used Bull for a door mat, ripping his shirt to shreds. The trouble began when Bull called the bout a draw and Dusek and Marshall carried the thing over for five more minutes of their own accord.

Moose Teams Roll League Matches on Home Lanes.

Tonight's bowling schedule at the Meder alleys will be headed by Moose Traveling league matches.

Moose No. 2 meets Akron at 8 p. m., and the No. 1 team, which trails the league leading No. 2 entry by only a few games, meets Orrville at 9.

A number of special matches are on tap Sunday afternoon at the Mansfield alleys. The South Plant Hot Mills meet Harley's lodge of Tiffin, Heilman's Grocery women bowl the Tiffin Beveridges, Liederkranz women face the Wallhide Paints, also of Tiffin; Moose No. 1 rolls Ashland, Rodney Chandler Tires tackle Utica and the Rice Recreation of Wooster engage the Galion Hy-Jenks.

The Oldsmobiles travel to Sandusky for a Northern Ohio traveling league match Sunday.

Vie in Semi-Final Bout on Monday's Show.

Tim Nolan, Quality club matchmaker, announced the completion of another bout for Monday night's wrestling show to be staged in the Armory ring.

Nolan announced that he has obtained Ray Ryan of Hoboken, N. J., and Dutch Schultz of Milwaukee to grapple in the semi-final match on the all-light-heavyweight card.

This match supports the main-event pitting the popular colored matman, "Gentleman Jack" Clayburn, Portland, Ore., against Ivan Barronoff, Russia's gift to the wrestling world.

Monday has been designated as "Ladies' Night" by Nolan, and all women accompanied by escorts will be admitted free.

County Cage Tourney Opens With Two Contests Tonight

Lexington Faces Plymouth, Ontario Meets Madison In Mansfield Gym.

TWO ball games that promise to provide more than an ordinary amount of action will inaugurate the 14th annual Richland county Class B high school basketball tournament on the Mansfield high planks tonight.

Tonight's first round card will be opened with an 8 p. m. game between Lexington and Plymouth. Ontario, defending champion, and Madison, two old rivals, will tangle in the other tilt at 9 p. m.

Fierce Fight Seen.

These two games open a tournament which is expected to develop into one of the fiercest ever fought in the county.

While the defending champions may rule the favorites on the strength of their retention of the county league title, the elimination includes a number of strong contenders.

Shiloh, Butler and Madison, to mention a few, appear capable of causing a lot of damage to the Ontario title hopes.

The Ontario Lexington-Plymouth game should get the tournament off to a fast start tonight. These two clubs rate high in the pre-tournament dope, and the team that wins is likely to advance to the more important championship tilts.

It is needless to explain that the renewal of the Ontario-Madison rivalry will be packed with action. These two schools derive a great deal of satisfaction out of trimming each other, and, judging from the results of their meetings this season, the game tonight might go either way.

Ontario, which won the county and district titles last year to advance to the state tournament, will be out to avenge the only defeat on its record, applied by the Rams during the league season.

Incidentally, Madison and Ontario clashed in the tournament finals last year, and the winner of tonight's setto will be heavily favored to reach the title round next week.

Play Again Thursday.

The tournament will be resumed at the Tyger lair Thursday with a program of four games. In addition to tonight's winners, the games will involve Butler, Bellville, Shiloh, Adario, Union and Lucas, which drew byes in the opening round.

Consolation games will be played at Lexington next Friday, with the semi-finals and finals billed at Mansfield high a week from today.

W. A. Wickline of Lexington is tournament director, and he has selected Roy B. Clymer of Elyria and his brother, R. Don Clymer of Findlay, as officials. Ervin Brune and P. J. Winters of Simpson junior high will serve as official scorer and timer, respectively.

Defends Title In Cleveland

Steele Places Crown at Stake In Bout at Barth

CLEVELAND. —(AP)— Carmen Barth, Cleveland's former Olympic boxing champion, meets Champion Freddy Steele tonight for the middleweight title, a scheduled 15-round battle which Barth says "is all even up with me."

Barth, shifty fighter who maneuvers his foe to gain an opening, has never before been called upon to go over a 15-round route.

"But don't forget," remarked the youth facing his big chance, "the route is something to give the other fellow a lot of thought, too. It's all even up with me."

Barth's tutors have emphasized the need for a rapier left hand against Steele's lethal right. The Clevelander's left has been his mainstay in his brief but impressive professional career.

The champion was one pound under the weight limit of 160 pounds yesterday, and Barth—whose battle weight usually is around 165—was a pound over.

The Tacoma, Wash., titleholder has been guaranteed a $20,000 purse for the encounter. James J. Braddock, former heavyweight champion, will referee the bout, headliner on a charity benefit card.

The Bulldogs of Butler high dropped the curtain on their 1937-38 Richland county league schedule in an impressive fashion last night by drubbing Bellville, 50 to 11, at Butler.

Last night's victory gave Butler a record of nine triumphs and two defeats. The club finished the race in second place, behind the championship Ontario club which brought its season to a close last week.

Butler, with little Kenny Miller playing the leading role, blanked Bellville in the initial quarter to go ahead, 15 to 0. The invaders encountered trouble in solving Butler's defense and only collected three baskets the balance of the game.

The Bulldogs found the going easy in the second frame and marched to an overwhelming, 27 to 6, lead at the half. Butler outscored Bellville, 10 to 2, to pile more points to their commanding advantage, and as the two clubs resumed play in the final period, was leading, 37 to 8.

Miller rattled the backboards for 27 points to top the individual scoring for the evening. He collected 12 goals and three free throws. Martin was the only Bellville player to account for more than two points, being high with four.

Butler also won the preliminary attraction, 18 to 11.

LUCAS SMOTHERS UNION IN FINALS

The sharpshooting basketeers of Lucas high closed their Richland county league season last night by smothering Union, 52 to 25, on the Union court. The victory enabled the Cubs to end their schedule in fourth place in the circuit race.

With Tom Gruelich, the league's individual scoring leader, establishing a new season scoring record with 28 points, Lucas hopped into the lead in the opening stanza and coasted through.

The Cubs went ahead, 15 to 6, in the opening period, and were leading, 27 to 10, at halftime. Union fought desperately to overtake the winners, but was unable to throttle the sharp-shooting Greulich.

MT. VERNON — The sharpshooting Yellow Jackets retained their share of first place with Marion in the N. C. O. conference race here last night by drubbing Bucyrus, 68 to 42, before the largest crowd of the season.

The Jackets turned in one of the finest performances of the season in handing the Redmen their worst defeat of the year. The loss dropped Bucyrus a game and a half behind the co-leaders.

With Eddie Lore and Tommy Trott accounting for more than half the points, the Jackets grabbed the lead in the opening stanza, and, although Bucyrus pressed them the first half, were never in trouble. Lore took things in hand at the beginning of the third frame and dropped in nine straight points to shove the Jackets into a commanding lead.

Mt. Vernon led, 15-11, in the opening quarter, 29 to 23, at the half, and 53 to 31, going into the final stanza.

Trott collected 24 points to set the individual pace, while Lore, league leading individual scorer, dropped in 22 to increase his season's total to 132, nine points short of the N. C. O. record set by Bob Sprague of Ashland last year.

The Mt. Vernon reserves defeated Bucyrus, 40 to 18, in the preliminary.

THE PIPER'S TUNE

CHAPTER XXXIII

"No use talking, Dad. That's the way to do business — never knew it to fail if you handle them right. I've never been able to do it the way I wanted to before. I've not been able to manage any really good clubs and there are a lot of fellows you can't get to an office and chaps you can't very well ask into a hotel bar. This was a swell idea of yours. We'll do some business—between us."

Cradad winced a little at Terry's direct way of putting it.

"Dad, that last cocktail sort of put an edge on my appetite. I could be badgered into staying for dinner, if you've anything in the chuck wagon."

"Oh, please do!"

After dinner, Gerta dropped in. "It was really funny," she laughed. "I don't know why those society reporters never get their stories straight. But they simply don't. Both papers I saw said that I was entertaining with you! Fancy." She turned abruptly to Terry. "And how did you make out with all the terribly important business you were going to do today?"

* * *

Caradad thought she sensed an undercurrent of expectancy in Gerta's voice. Nor was she reassured when Terry assumed that air of elaborate indifference, the one she so thoroughly disliked.

"Oh, just so-so."

Did Gerta know that tea-time conference was being planned? Caradad tried to dismiss the thought as quickly as it entered her mind.

"Don't forget you asked for it." That was John Severance's admonition when he had told Caradad last night about his "temptations." In the days that followed the housewarming, those words recurred so often to Caradad that they became something of a motto and helped her to accept the situation stoically.

Afternoons and evenings, her drawing-room — and the living room, hall and library—took on the appearance of a salon for the thirsty, for idlers and good-natured gossipers. Terry put in appearance quite regularly before dinner and was unfailingly on hand of an evening. Caradad wondered if he had transferred his working quarters from Mr. Evans' office to her cozy library, but disliked to ask him.

For some reason, Gerta seldom appeared. And John Severance but once—to make his party call, he explained. It chanced that Terry was using the library at the time and Caradad had tea with her one and favored notable.

"Well?" he remarked quizzically, stirring his tea, "How is the society racket by this time?"

"Oh, I'm having a good time," Caradad assured him. "And speaking of rackets, has anybody tried to waylay you since that day in the country?"

"Of course not. Why?"

"It was the silliest thing—I never told anybody. But, several times after that, when I was shopping, I had the feeling that some one was following me. Once, I was sure I knew who it was."

"Really?" Severance put down his cup and waited.

"The man I thought it was stood near me in a store, but I didn't get a good look at his face. Then the very next day, he was just behind me on State street in a crowd. I stopped suddenly and looked in a window and he had to pass me. I recognized the suit and hat he was wearing, but as soon as I saw his face—well, I knew he wasn't any gangster or somebody like that."

"How could you tell?"

"He looked so perfectly dumb and helpless."

"Just a coincidence, I imagine." There was an amused light in Severance's face. That would be a good story to pass along to some of his friends at detective headquarters. "Then you haven't changed your mind yet about—Australia?"

"But I didn't know there was anything to change my mind about."

"I tried to suggest there might be some danger of your being kidnaped. I thought you might have been following the matter up."

"Oh, no. I still would like to go there—to lots of other places, too. But I expect to buy a ticket when the time comes—a least go of my own accord."

"Well, I've been hoping that your resistance would show signs of breaking—about all this, I mean." He gestured at his immediate surroundings. "I'm sailing the second of September. From Montreal."

"That has a very final sound," Caradad told him slowly.

"I've already reserved a suite. I like the shorter crossing. There's still time for you to—make use of me in some capacity."

"Mr. Severance. . ."

"The name is John—or should be by this time, I would think. My intimates, the few I have, usually call me J. S. The S stands for the quaint name of Smith."

"Well, then—J. S." the color deepened in Caradad's cheecks as she employed the name, "You have a peculiar way — of saying things. Perhaps I mean of taking things for granted."

"But I admitted I was a bounder, didn't I? I'm getting so that I rather glory in it. I can't put it too plainly, but if by any undreamed of chance you—well, ever thought of Australia—I'd give everything I possess to be able to do something about it. In the perfectly orthodox way. Under the circumstances, that's about as far as I can go."

* * *

It was entirely too far, Caradad's heart told her. Oh, much too far. But there was so sudden a longing in the eyes watching hers that she could not manage the flippant answer that would have relieved her feelings. Any more than she could have summoned resentment against this man's seeming effrontery. Amazing effrontery. That's what it was.

"May I give you some tea?" she asked, when she was sure of her voice.

"Thanks, no. Just a bit of paper, if you have it handy. I'd like to give you a memorandum."

Still wondering, Caradad stepped to a small secretary and came back with a correspondence card in her hand. "Will this do?"

"Nicely." He produced his pen. "I'm putting down the number of my phone — it's not listed. I'll jot down my name, too, so you won't get it mixed with any other numbers."

Caradad repressed a smile as she looked at the bold script. "Were you expecting me to call you, then?" she ventured.

"Yes. You promised you would in case you—in case I could be of any service. It's what one might call a hunch, I suppose. But I have the feeling that I will hear from you one day. At all events, I will feel better knowing that you can reach me when you want me. By the way, in case I shouldn't happen to be in, don't hesitate to leave word with my man Alec. He's very trustworthy. But I really must be running along. Thanks for the tea. . . and you."

"But I will see you again before you sail, won't I? That's quite some time."

"I'm afraid you will." He rose to his feet. "I mean I'm afraid my fortitude won't stand the test. And, of course, it should. Ah. ."

* *

His slight exclamation was caused by the sight of Terry passing through the hall, one hand resting in a friendly fashion on the shoulder of a short, stout man.

"Strange," Severance mused, "how your fiance always pops out of cover when I have you to myself for a minute. The first thing we know, he will be believing my story about making love to you."

Something of the sort may have been in Terry's mind when he later strolled into the living room.

"Looks to me as though you had our old friend Severance coming along pretty well now. We'll have to start working on him—one of these fine days." He laughed, but it sounded a trifle forced to Caradad. "That's one commission I'll have to split, I'd say."

Days and nights, all much alike for Dad in her lofty home on the lake front, drifted by with disconcerting speed, before she realized it, August had arrived. Each time the date was brought to her attention, she involuntarily thought of September. The second of September. A curious little pang of loneliness was somehow attached to that date and she had the feeling it always would be like that.

The weather was hot, but the apartment usually was comfortable. In spite of the vacation season, a large number of Caradad's and Terry's friend dropped in, in the informal fashion and paid lingering compliments to Wilberforce's Tom Collinses.

Terry seemed to have more time on his hands now. At least his schedule had undergone a change. So much so that Caradad was satisfied he had sacrificed his office connections. He said nothing about it and, for some reason, her pride would not allow her to ask. Terry still talked in the terms of continued prosperity, but exhibited a growing reticence for detail as time passed. But he was eminently satisfied with his existence. That much was evident.

Gerta's continued absence from the apartment constituted a mild puzzle for Caradad. Gerta had called on the phone several times to apologize for her seeming negligence and to chat for a few moments in her usual friendly fashion. The hot weather always fatigued her and she could not afford another vacation, as much as she lnoged for one. Curiously enough, nothing was said about Caradad's coming to see her.

John Severance had not come back, either. Nick Tankersley also was among the missing. Caradad admitted that his cherubic face and nonsensical talk would have been a welcome variation in the stream of totally uninteresting callers.

It was about this time that Terry began exhibiting a moody restlessness that Caradad always associated with some proposed change of plan or fresh desire. She was at some pains to ignore it, knowing that it would be divulged in due time.

* * *

One sultry evening after dinner when Dad and Terry chanced to be alone in her little penthouse garden, sitting side by side on a swing seat, Terry began abruptly: "Dad, I've just begun to realize that I've been treating you like a brute."

"In what way?" Caradad smiled slightly to herself in the gloom.

"Why, I know well enough you've cooped yourself up here in town this summer on my account—in all this heat and dirt. You should have gone away."

"But there is no place particularly that I want to go, Terry," she returned in some surprise. "I doubt if I could find any place where I would be any more comfortable than right here at home."

"But this certainly isn't what most women would consider a home. There's always a flock of tramps underfoot here — come for what they can get free. That's the trouble with entertaining friends in a place like this. To get the ones you want, you have to put up with a lot of riffraff."

"But it keeps one from being lonely."

* * *

If Terry noticed the flat tone in which this was said, he gave no hint of it. Caradad was trying to conceal her surprise. Surely he must know that he was largely responsible for the "riffraff."

"Things are pretty slow," he said after a moment. "As a matter of fact, I've been thinking . . ." He paused to light a cigarct. "I've been thinking that I might run away for a few days—sort of combine business and pleasure. I've been trying to line up an old customer in a worth-while deal. His name is Worth. Maybe you've heard me speak of him."

"I don't believe so." Caradad said it soberly; Terry always was so elaborate at times like this.

"Well, anyway, I had a break. He has quiet summer place up in the Wisconsin lake country—belongs to a club that has its own polo field. He wrote me that he wished I were there—would like to have my opinion of some ponies he's breaking in. I wouldn't mind having a few days in the saddle. And I think I might be able to use the evenings to pay expenses—more than pay expenses."

"Then I would go by all means. The outing would be good for you."

"I'd like to—really ought to. But it seems a mean trick to run off and leave you in this place alone."

"That's perfectly silly."

There was silence for a time. Then he said hesitatingly, "You're a trump, Dad. I often wonder why you should go to the trouble to do so much for me. Nobody else ever did. I can't think of anything I ever have done for you. I know I bullied the life out of you when you were a kid."

"I must have liked it."

"Then I deliberately let you go and never even tried to keep track of you. I might never have seen you again, if you hadn't been sweet enough to find me—and do all the things you've done since. I hate to think where I'd be right now, if it weren't for you, Dad."

"It's nothing to feel so dreadfully remorseful over. Terry."

"I'm not so sure. I've done a lot of thinking lately, Dad. For one thing, I've been working like the devil and not being any too particular, maybe. I've cleaned up better than I expected. One more break, and I'll be able to square you, Dad. Just in money."

"But, Terry . . ."

"I know. That's just one more way in which you've been a trump. But I want to get my slate as clean as I can and as soon as I can. I realize that I've been pretty much of a mucker—but everything's going to be different—before long. It isn't just the money you've invested in me. I can repay that in time, but I'd like to repay your faith. You must have had it for a long time."

* * *

There wes a near wistfulness in his voice that stirred Caradad strangely, sent a little glow through her heart. It was a long time since any words of Terry Cantine had done that. But the disillusionments brought by these weeks of attempted homemaking had left their mark.

Terry's hand came out and covered hers.

"Dad . . . "he said softly, ". . . since. If you had asked me then, I most likely would have said yes. Now, I can't . . . say anything.

Terry's fingers closed about hers. "I get it, Dad. Thanks for being on the level. You mean that it's up to me to make good—or to make your ideals good. That's going to be my job. When I get back, I'll be off to a fresh start. Maybe you'll be able to tell me something then."

"Maybe." Caradad gently released her hand.

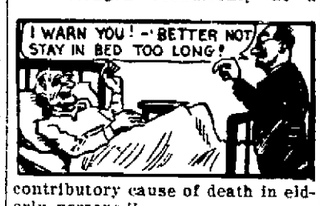
It's Odd

But It's Science.

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Cause of death—confinement in bed. Number of deaths from being in bed—10. Patients—all over 65 years of age.

These figures came from the Journal of the American Medical association, in a report by L. B. Laplace, M. D., and J. T. Nicholson, M. D., of Philadelphia. The title of their report was:

"Prolonged recumbency as a



contributory cause of death in elderly persons."

Their conclusion, however, was that in 10 cases being in bed was the real cause. The fact that elderly persons are likely to die if they stay in bed too long—usually several months—is an old medical story.

The Philadelphia physicians in these 10 cases sought a more exact explanation. They found that long lying down, because it curtails a persons movements, resulted in congestion of blood in the capillaries.

That, in turn, decreased circulation in the large blood vessels. As a result, the blood failed to carry enough oxygen to the tisues and this caused permanent damage to the capillaries. After this, circulation of the blood began to fail, and death was the result.

ADAMICK CAN PUNCH, MOVE LIKE A SPEEDY MIDDLE-WEIGHT

By DAVIS J. WALSH
(INS Sports Editor)

NEW YORK—He was pelted, belted, bashed, maimed and all but beheaded during the longest three minutes Jimmy Adamick ever again will live through. But at the close of a heartbreaking tenth and final round last night, they walked away from Harry Thomas and over to Adamick's corner, there to raise his hand in token of victory.

Adamick

He had just survived a round that, I'm convinced, would have wound up with Louis in a stupor and Schmeling in a trance. Only the old Dempsey could have taken a punching like that and stayed in there. Adamick did many things last night, including some that were wrong, but that heroic tenth round made believers out of most of us.

The decision was unanimous, but it didn't sit well with the strictly Class AA attendance of 7,000, which yowled in high derision and was all for calling out the militia or something. In fact, leaving Madison Square Garden, I heard one witness say to another: "Wouldn't it be funny if Adamick won the heavyweight championship?"

Personally, I think it would be very funny if he doesn't. An official forfeiture of the third round by Thomas for an alleged low punch was a vital factor in calling Adamick the winner, at least in my book. But it's also in my book that a few months from now, he'll be popping Thomases of this life with abandon. He showed last night that he can punch, move like a middleweight and take it as only Dempsey could. If he needs anything else, it must be a crowbar.

As a matter of fact, I'm beginning to wonder whether that wouldn't have been a good idea for both of them. Adamick, like Schmeling, was clipped right under the open up hell took a brutal slathering in the third and seventh and, in the tenth was almost batted for his intellect.

At four other points in the fight, Thomas was doing a Leon Errol into the ropes and, long before the end the forehead over his right eye swelled alarmingly. It finally looked like the portico of a two-family house.

But there were no knockdowns. These blokes simply are tougher than a pair of half-soles.

* * *

THOMAS was much better this time than he was in the Schmeling fight and, in fact good enough to have stolen the play last night if Referee Arthur Donovan hadn't called a low punch in the third round. Thomas won that round from here to the horizon, but they gave it to the other guy on a technicality and so I wound up with a score of six rounds for Adamick to four for Thomas.

Barring the foul though—which incidentally was not evident to me—my score would have been five to five and a decision to Thomas on the testimony of his great flash back through the tenth round. A few months hence this pair won't even be in the same league but it seemed that close last night although not to two of the officials.

Ike Smith Stars as Mansfield High Cagers Close Season With Impressive Victory; Reserves Stopped.

By CHARLES MARTIN

MANSFIELD fans got a glimpse of the Indiana brand of basketball last night, but they were not greatly impressed.

If there is any difference between the Indiana and Ohio styles, the fair-sized crowd at Mansfield high school failed to see any evidence of it.

Yes, you have to score buckets in Indiana the same as you do in Ohio to win the court games.

LaGrange represented the basketball-minded state of Indiana, and Mansfield was the Buckeye state representatives. Mansfield won the game, and impressively too, the score being 39 to 32.

Ike Smith Stars.

Playing without the services of Johnny Hallabrin, who is ill, the Tygers, with little Ike Smith again playing a stellar role, presented a fine brand of ball as they toppled the Hoosiers to conclude their regular schedule with a record of 10 victories and six losses.

While this was the last game on the schedule, Coach Russ Murphy said today that it is likely that the Tygers will make at least one more appearance before the district tournament.

He said that there is still a possibility that the postponed Willard game will be played. If the game is cancelled, the Tygers may schedule a tilt with the Alumni club, he said.

With Smith, who replaced Hallabrin in the lineup, leading the way, Mansfield, after getting off to a slow start last night, came into its own to win going away.

The Lions of LaGrange gave the Tygers a real battle, but were unable to cope with Mansfield's fast-breaking attack.

After Mansfield opened the scoring on Smith's side shot, LaGrange found the range long enough to hop into a 5-2 lead, but the Tygers came right back to knot the score at 7-all and then go ahead, 9 to 7, as the period ended.

The Lions started clicking again soon after the opening of the second stanza, and after a nip-and-tuck scoring battle pushed ahead to take a 16 to 15 advantage at the half.

Mansfield's brilliant defense played an important role in the third chapter. The Tygers set the invaders down with six points and shot into the lead in quick order. As the quarter ended Mansfield led, 23 to 22.

And then LaGrange, fighting desperately to overtage the taller Mansfield club, broke loose in the early minutes of the final period to knot the score on two occasions, and then took a 26 to 25 lead.

Smith broke into the spotlight at this point and took care of the situation in no time. His first goal shoved the Tygers ahead, and then he gave them a larger lead with a free throw and another bucket. After that it was all over. The visitors tried hard to come back, but Mansfield's stalling during the final seconds kept them in check.

Scores 12 Points.

Smith was the offensive star of the evening dropping in 12 points, while Jack Lyons trailed him with 10. Todd scored nine to top the losers.

The Elks club of the City Class A league defeated the Reserves, 25 to 13, in one of the preliminary games, to halt an 11-game winning streak and the No. 2 Reserves walloped the Baptist, 22 to 14, in the other. Gene Brandon, former Mansfield high star, led the Elks with eight points. Patterson was high-point man for the No. 2 Reserves with nine.

Adamick Shows Promise as He Defeats Thomas In New York.

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK—(AP)—A year from now, if he doesn't happen to have an accident like fighting Joe Louis or Max Schmeling in the meantime young Jimmy Adamick is likely to be a very potent factor in the heavyweight ranks.

The local fistic fraternity, which was more than little skeptical of the Detroit boy, passed that verdict after watching him beat tough Harry Thomas by a fair margin in his eastern bow last night at the Garden.

Plenty of Heart.

Jimmy wasn't, of course, the man-eater he had been pictured by his well known sponsor, Jack Kearns. That was more than anybody expected. But he proved himself a good, tough scrapper, with a better than average left hook and plenty of heart.

Anyway, it turned out later in the dressing room that Kearns had been grievously misunderstood when he said Adamick was "better than Dempsey." Everybody thought he was referring to the Dempsey of Toledo, but the good doctor straightened that out.

"Now wait," he said. "Did you see Dempsey when he fought Willie Meehan? That's the Dempsey I was talking about, Jimmie's that good, if not better."

Associated Press scored seven rounds for Adamick and three for Thomas with Thomas dropping one heat because of a low blow. The decision of the three officials was unanimous.

The high spot of the meeting for the scanty crowd of 6,600 came in the closing round, when the battered Thomas, appearing ripe for a knockout, suddenly lashed out with a right that caught Adamick flush on the jaw and sent the overconfident youngster reeling.

Thomas pounced on the leather, and the critics found that Adamick could take it. Thomas let him have both barrels right on the old button as the Detroit kid floundered about. But Jimmy weathered it and came back punching. Thomas kept the upper-hand right to the final bell, though, and his comeback had been so game that the decision was booed.

Hits Like Schmeling.

Thomas came out of it with an egg over his right eye and a conviction that Adamick can't hit in the same league with Schmeling.

The Twin-Valley league champions, whose only defeat was suffered in a game with the Mansfield Reserves, led 15 to 5 at the half. The Shiloh Reserves won the prelim 18 to 7.

MEET IN FINALS TODAY

ORLANDO, Fla.—(INS)—Marion Miley of Ft. Pierce, Fla., and Lexington, Ky., and Mrs. Lillian Zech, Chicago, meet today in the finals of the annual mid-Florida women's golf championship.

We admit Everett Marshall—is he champion?—took quite a beating in his rassle bout in Cleveland with Ernie Dusek, the dirty one of the Dusek family, for Everett is out there among the daisies, or chairs, in the photo above, but take a look at the referee, Bull Weideman, who has worked many matches in Mansfield. The boys used Bull for a door mat, ripping his shirt to shreds. The trouble began when Bull called the bout a draw and Dusek and Marshall carried the thing over for five more minutes of their own accord.

County Cage Tourney Opens With Two Contests Tonight

Lexington Faces Plymouth, Ontario Meets Madison In Mansfield Gym.

TWO ball games that promise to provide more than an ordinary amount of action will inaugurate the 14th annual Richland county Class B high school basketball tournament on the Mansfield high planks tonight.

Tonight's first round card will be opened with an 8 p. m. game between Lexington and Plymouth. Ontario, defending champion, and Madison, two old rivals, will tangle in the other tilt at 9 p. m.

Fierce Fight Seen.

These two games open a tournament which is expected to develop into one of the fiercest ever fought in the county.

While the defending champions may rule the favorites on the strength of their retention of the county league title, the elimination includes a number of strong contenders.

Shiloh, Butler and Madison, to mention a few, appear capable of causing a lot of damage to the Ontario title hopes.

The Ontario-Lexington-Plymouth game should get the tournament off to a fast start tonight. These two clubs rate high in the pre-tournament dope, and the team that wins is likely to advance to the more important championship tilts.

It is needless to explain that the renewal of the Ontario-Madison rivalry will be packed with action. These two schools derive a great deal of satisfaction out of trimming each other, and, judging from the results of their meetings this season, the game tonight might go either way.

Ontario, which won the county and district titles last year to advance to the state tournament, will be out to avenge the only defeat on its record, applied by the Rams during the league season.

Incidentally, Madison and Ontario clashed in the tournament finals last year, and the winner of tonight's setto will be heavily favored to reach the title round next week.

Play Again Thursday.

The tournament will be resumed at the Tyger lair Thursday with a program of four games. In addition to tonight's winners, the games will involve Butler, Bellville, Shiloh, Adario, Union and Lucas, which drew byes in the opening round.

Consolation games will be played at Lexington next Friday, with the semi-finals and finals billed at Mansfield high a week from today.

W. A. Wickline of Lexington is tournament director, and he has selected Roy B. Clymer of Elyria and his brother, R. Don Clymer of Findlay, as officials. Ervin Brune and P. J. Winters of Simpson junior high will serve as official scorer and timer, respectively.

Defends Title In Cleveland

Steele Places Crown at Stake In Bout at Barth.

CLEVELAND —(AP)— Carmen Barth, Cleveland's former Olympic boxing champion, meets Champion Freddy Steele tonight for the middleweight title, a scheduled 15-round battle which Barth says "is all even up with me."

Barth, shifty fighter who maneuvers his foe to gain an opening, has never before been called upon to go over a 15-round route.

"But don't forget," remarked the youth facing his big chance, "the route is something to give the other fellow a lot of thought, too. It's all even up with me."

Barth's tutors have emphasized the need for a rapier left hand against Steele's lethal right. The Clevelander's left has been his mainstay in his brief but impressive professional career.

The champion was one pound under the weight limit of 160 pounds yesterday, and Barth—whose battle weight usually is around 165—was a pound over.

The Tacoma, Wash., titleholder has been guaranteed a $20,000 purse for the encounter. James J. Braddock, former heavyweight champion, will referee the bout, headliner on a charity benefit card.

The Bulldogs of Butler high dropped the curtain on their 1937-38 Richland county league schedule in an impressive fashion last night by drubbing Bellville, 50 to 11, at Butler.

Last night's victory gave Butler a record of nine triumphs and two defeats. The club finished the race in second place, behind the championship Ontario club which brought its season to a close last week.

Butler, with little Kenny Miller playing the leading role, blanked Bellville in the initial quarter to go ahead, 15 to 0. The invaders encountered trouble in solving Butler's defense and only collected three baskets the balance of the game.

The Bulldogs found the going easy in the second frame and marched to an overwhelming, 27 to 6, lead at the half. Butler outscored Bellville, 10 to 2, to pile more points to their commanding advantage, and as the two clubs resumed play in the final period, was leading, 37 to 8.

Miller rattled the backboards for 27 points to top the individual scoring for the evening. He collected 12 goals and three free throws. Martin was the only Bellville player to account for more than two points, being high with four.

Butler also won the preliminary attraction, 18 to 11.

LUCAS SMOTHERS UNION IN FINALS

The sharpshooting basketeers of Lucas high closed their Richland county league season last night by smothering Union, 52 to 25, on the Union court. The victory enabled the Cubs to end their schedule in fourth place in the circuit race.

With Tom Gruelich, the league's individual scoring leader, establishing a new season scoring record with 28 points, Lucas hopped into the lead in the opening stanza and coasted through.

The Cubs went ahead, 15 to 6, in the opening period, and were leading, 27 to 10, at halftime. Union fought desperately to overtake the winners, but was unable to throttle the sharp-shooting Greulich.

MT. VERNON — The sharpshooting Yellow Jackets retained their share of first place with Marion in the N. C. O. conference race here last night by drubbing Bucyrus, 68 to 42, before the largest crowd of the season.

The Jackets turned in one of the finest performances of the season in handing the Redmen their worst defeat of the year. The loss dropped Bucyrus a game and a half behind the co-leaders.

With Eddie Lore and Tommy Trott accounting for more than half the points, the Jackets grabbed the lead in the opening stanza, and, although Bucyrus pressed them the first half, were never in trouble. Lore took things in hand at the beginning of the third frame and dropped in nine straight points to shove the Jackets into a commanding lead.

Mt. Vernon led, 15-11, in the opening quarter, 29 to 22, at the half, and 53 to 31, going into the final stanza.

Trott collected 24 points to set the individual pace, while Lore, league leading individual scorer, dropped in 22 to increase his season's total to 132, nine points short of the N. C. O. record set by Bob Sprague of Ashland last year.

RANDOM SHOTS

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

RICHLAND county's high school basketball tournament starts tonight at the point where it left off last year. Ontario and Madison collided in the finals last season, and they tangle in a first round game at the Tyger's lair tonight. It this game, and the one between Lexington and Plymouth doesn't pack the Mansfield plant to the rafters we'll be greatly surprised.

CHAPTER XXXIII

"No use talking, Dad. That's the way to do business — never knew it to fail if you handle them right. I've never been able to do it the way I wanted to before. I've not been able to manage any really good clubs and there are a lot of fellows you can't get to an office and chaps you can't very well ask into a hotel bar. This was a swell idea of yours. We'll do some business—between us."

Cradad winced a little at Terry's direct way of putting it.

"Dad, that last cocktail sort of put an edge on my appetite. I could be badgered into staying for dinner, if you've anything in the chuck wagon."

"Oh, please do!"

After dinner, Gerta dropped in. "It was really funny," she laughed. "I don't know why those society reporters never get their stories straight. But they simply don't. Both papers I saw said that I was entertaining with you! Fancy." She turned abruptly to Terry. "And how did you make out with all the terribly important business you were going to do today?"

* * *

Caradad thought she sensed an undercurrent of expectancy in Gerta's voice. Nor was she reassured when Terry assumed that air of elaborate indifference, the one she so thoroughly disliked.

"Oh, just so-so."

Did Gerta know that tea-time conference was being planned? Caradad tried to dismiss the thought as quickly as it entered her mind.

"Don't forget you asked for it." That was John Severance's admonition when he had told Caradad last night about his "temptations." In the days that followed the housewarming, those words recurred so often to Caradad that they became something of a motto and helped her to accept the situation stoically.

Afternoons and evenings, her drawing-room — and the living room, hall and library—took on the appearance of a salon for the thirsty, for idlers and good-natured gossipers. Terry put in appearance quite regularly before dinner and was unfailingly on hand of an evening. Caradad wondered if he had transferred his working quarters from Mr. Evans' office to her cozy library, but disliked to ask him.

For some reason, Gerta seldom appeared. And John Severance but once—to make his party call, he explained. It chanced that Terry was using the library at the time and Caradad had tea with her one and favored notable.

"Well?" he remarked quizzically, stirring his tea. "How is the society racket by this time?"

"Oh, I'm having a good time," Caradad assured him. "And speaking of rackets, has anybody tried to waylay you since that day in the country?"

"Of course not. Why?"

"It was the silliest thing—I never told anybody. But, several times after that, when I was shopping, I had the feeling that some one was following me. Once, I was sure I knew who it was."

"Really?" Severance put down his cup and waited.

"The man I thought it was stood near me in a store, but I didn't get a good look at his face. Then the very next day, he was just behind me on State street in a crowd. I stopped suddenly and looked in a window and he had to pass me. I recognized the suit and hat he was wearing, but as soon as I saw his face—well, I knew he wasn't any gangster or somebody like that."

"How could you tell?"

"He looked so perfectly dumb and helpless."

"Just a coincidence, I imagine." There was an amused light in Severance's face. That would be a good story to pass along to some of his friends at detective headquarters. "Then you haven't changed your mind yet about—Australia?"

"But I didn't know there was anything to change my mind about."

"I tried to suggest there might be some danger of your being kidnaped. I thought you might have been following the matter up."

"Oh, no. I still would like to go there—to lots of other places, too. But I expect to buy a ticket when the time comes—a least go of my own accord."

"Well, I've been hoping that your resistance would show signs of breaking—about all this, I mean." He gestured at his immediate surroundings. "I'm sailing the second of September. From Montreal."

"That has a very final sound," Caradad told him slowly.

"I've already reserved a suite. I like the shorter crossing. There's still time for you to—make use of me in some capacity."

"Mr. Severance..."

"The name is John—or should be by this time, I would think. My intimates, the few I have, usually call me J. S. The S stands for the quaint name of Smith."

"Well, then—J. S." the color deepened in Caradad's cheecks as she employed the name, "You have a peculiar way — of saying things. Perhaps I mean of taking things for granted."

"But I admitted I was a bounder, didn't I? I'm getting so that I rather glory in it. I can't put it too plainly, but if by any undreamed of chance you—well, ever thought of Australia—I'd give everything I possess to be able to do something about it. In the perfectly orthodox way. Under the circumstances, that's about as far as I can go."

* * *

It was entirely too far, Caradad's heart told her. Oh, much too far. But there was so sudden a longing in the eyes watching hers that she could not manage the flippant answer that would have relieved her feelings. Any more than she could have summoned resentment against this man's seeming effrontery. Amazing effrontery. That's what it was.

"May I give you some tea?" she asked, when she was sure of her voice.

"Thanks, no. Just a bit of paper, if you have it handy. I'd like to give you a memorandum."

Still wondering, Caradad stepped to a small secretary and came back with a correspondence card in her hand. "Will this do?"

"Nicely." He produced his pen. "I'm putting down the number of my phone — it's not listed. I'll jot down my name, too, so you won't get it mixed with any other numbers."

Caradad repressed a smile as she looked at the bold script. "Were you expecting me to call you, then?" she ventured.

"Yes. You promised you would in case you—in case I could be of any service. It's what one might call a hunch, I suppose. But I have the feeling that I will hear from you one day. At all events, I will feel better knowing that you can reach me when you want me. By the way, in case I shouldn't happen to be in, don't hesitate to leave word with my man Alec. He's very trustworthy. But I really must be running along. Thanks for the tea...and you."

"But I will see you again before you sail, won't I? That's quite some time."

"I'm afraid you will." He rose to his feet. "I mean I'm afraid my fortitude won't stand the test. And, of course, it should. Ah. . ."

* * *

His slight exclamation was caused by the sight of Terry passing through the hall, one hand resting in a friendly fashion on the shoulder of a short, stout man.

"Strange." Severance mused. "how your fiance always pops out of cover when I have you to myself for a minute. The first thing we know, he will be believing my story about making love to you."

Something of the sort may have been in Terry's mind when he later strolled into the living room.

"Looks to me as though you had our old friend Severance coming along pretty well now. We'll have to start working on him—one of these fine days." He laughed, but it sounded a trifle forced to Caradad. "That's one commission I'll have to split, I'd say."

Days and nights, all much alike for Dad in her lofty home on the lake front, drifted by with disconcerting speed, before she realized it, August had arrived. Each time the date was brought to her attention, she involuntarily thought of September. The second of September. A curious little pang of loneliness was somehow attached to that date and she had the feeling it always would be like that.

The weather was hot, but the apartment usually was comfortable. In spite of the vacation season, a large number of Caradad's and Terry's friend dropped in, in the informal fashion and paid lingering compliments to Wilberforce's Tom Collinses.

Terry seemed to have more time on his hands now. At least his schedule had undergone a change. So much so that Caradad was satisfied he had sacrificed his office connections. He said nothing about it and, for some reason, her pride would not allow her to ask. Terry still talked in the terms of continued prosperity, but exhibited a growing reticence for detail as time passed. But he was eminently satisfied with his existence. That much was evident.

Gerta's continued absence from the apartment constituted a mild puzzle for Caradad. Gerta had called on the phone several times to apologize for her seeming negligence and to chat for a few moments in her usual friendly fashion. The hot weather always fatigued her and she could not afford another vacation, as much as she lnoged for one. Curiously enough, nothing was said about Caradad's coming to see her.

John Severance had not come back, either. Nick Tankersley also was among the missing. Caradad admitted that his cherubic face and nonsensical talk would have been a welcome variation in the stream of totally uninteresting callers.

It was about this time that Terry began exhibiting a moody restlessness that Caradad always associated with some proposed change of plan or fresh desire. She was at some pains to ignore it, knowing that it would be divulged in due time.

* * *

One sultry evening after dinner when Dad and Terry chanced to be alone in her little penthouse garden, sitting side by side on a swing seat, Terry began abruptly: "Dad, I've just begun to realize that I've been treating you like a brute."

"In what way?" Caradad smiled slightly to herself in the gloom.

"Why, I know well enough you've cooped yourself up here in town this summer on my account—in all this heat and dirt. You should have gone away."

"But there is no place particularly that I want to go, Terry," she returned in some surprise. "I doubt if I could find any place where I would be any more comfortable than right here at home."

"But this certainly isn't what most women would consider a home. There's always a flock of tramps underfoot here — come for what they can get free. That's the trouble with entertaining friends in a place like this. To get the ones you want, you have to put up with a lot of riffraff."

"But it keeps one from being lonely."

* * *

If Terry noticed the flat tone in which this was said, he gave no hint of it. Caradad was trying to conceal her surprise. Surely he must know that he was largely responsible for the "riffraff."

"Things are pretty slow," he said after a moment. "As a matter of fact, I've been thinking . . ." He paused to light a cigarct. "I've been thinking that I might run away for a few days—sort of combine business and pleasure. I've been trying to line up an old customer in a worth-while deal. His name is Worth. Maybe you've heard me speak of him."

"I don't believe so." Caradad said it soberly; Terry always was so elaborate at times like this.

"Well, anyway, I had a break. He has quiet summer place up in the Wisconsin lake country—belongs to a club that has its own polo field. He wrote me that he wished I were there—would like to have my opinion of some ponies he's breaking in. I wouldn't mind having a few days in the saddle. And I think I might be able to use the evenings to pay expenses—more than pay expenses."

"Then I would go by all means. The outing would be good for you."

"I'd like to—really ought to. But it seems a mean trick to run off and leave you in this place alone."

"That's perfectly silly."

There was silence for a time. Then he said hesitatingly, "You're a trump, Dad. I often wonder why you should go to the trouble to do so much for me. Nobody else ever did. I can't think of anything I ever have done for you. I know I bullied the life out of you when you were a kid."

"I must have liked it."

"Then I deliberately let you go and never even tried to keep track of you. I might never have seen you again, if you hadn't been sweet enough to find me—and do all the things you've done since. I hate to think where I'd be right now, if it weren't for you, Dad."

"It's nothing to feel so dreadfully remorseful over, Terry."

"I'm not so sure. I've done a lot of thinking lately, Dad. For one thing, I've been working like the devil and not being any too particular, maybe. I've cleaned up better than I expected. One more break, and I'll be able to square you, Dad. Just in money."

"But, Terry . . ."

"I know. That's just one more way in which you've been a trump. But I want to get my slate as clean as I can and as soon as I can. I realize that I've been pretty much of a mucker—but everything's going to be different—before long. It isn't just the money you've invested in me. I can repay that in time, but I'd like to repay your faith. You must have had it for a long time."

* * *

There wes a near wistfulness in his voice that stirred Caradad strangely, sent a little glow through her heart. It was a long time since any words of Terry Cantine had done that. But the disillusionments brought by these weeks of attempted homemaking had left their mark.

Terry's hand came out and covered hers.

"Dad . . . "he said softly, "there's something I would like to know, if you care to tell me. You wanted people here to believe that you and I were—engaged. Just why?"

Caradad spoke with an effort. "I hardly know, Terry. I wanted to help you and you wouldn't let me—said you wouldn't let any girl help. I had to do something, so I suggested—that. I almost had to have Judge Pomphrette's help. It was the only thing I could tell him to avoid a fuss."

"You told me something like that before. But I've not been able to keep from wondering sometimes . . . that is . . . oh, Dad, I can't say it! But you know what I mean."

"Yes." Caradad's composure surprised herself. "You are wondering if I wanted it—to be true. Is that it?"

"There's not been a day since that I didn't wish it were. I know I haven't the right to say that—but I've never known anybody like you. When you're around I'm . . . content."

"Are you sure?"

"I know it, dear. Dad, when I get back from this trip we'll do things—your way—the way that will make you respect me. I hope. If I could do that, Dad, do you suppose there would be any chance that we could make it—true? Dad, I can't do without you."

"Are you so sure?" she said again.

"Very sure, my dear."

Caradad looked steadily out into the blanket of darkness that now hid the distant lake before she said in a low, even voice, "I always try to be very honest with myself. Do you want me to be very honest with you?"

"Yes."

"I guess I've lived a queer sort of life. I never grew up when and the way most other girls do. I was always alone. I even was alone when I went away to school. I didn't seem to mix. When I knew that Pop was going to leave me, I had to grow up all at once. Then there was—all that money."

"I know."

"You couldn't, quite. That's why I must tell you," she went on dispassionately. "Ever since I can remember, there must have been a glamor about you for me. I know there was. It was there even after I supposed I had lost you. When I had the chance to leave home, when I realized that I had nobody in the world . . . then I set out to find you," she finished simply.

"Then, Dad, don't you see . . ." Terry broke in eagerly. But she halted him.

"That wasn't so long ago, Terry. But it seems a very long time. I guess I have been growing up . . . since. If you had asked me then, I most likely would have said yes. Now, I can't . . . say anything.

Terry's fingers closed about hers. "I get it, Dad. Thanks for being on the level. You mean that it's up to me to make good—or to make your ideals good. That's going to be my job. When I get back, I'll be off to a fresh start. Maybe you'll be able to tell me something then."

"Maybe." Caradad gently released her hand.

PHILADELPHIA —(AP)— Cause of death—confinement in bed. Number of deaths from being in bed—10. Patients—all over 65 years of age.

These figures came from the Journal of the American Medical association. In a report by L. B. Laplace, M. D., and J. T. Nicholson, M. D., of Philadelphia. The title of their report was:

"Prolonged recumbency as a

contributory cause of death in elderly persons."

Their conclusion, however, was that in 10 cases being in bed was the real cause. The fact that elderly persons are likely to die if they stay in bed too long—usually several months—is an old medical story.

The Philadelphia physiclans in these 10 cases sought a more exact explanation. They found that long lying down, because it curtails a persons movements, resulted in congestion of blood in the capillaries.

That, in turn, decreased circulation in the large blood vessels. As a result, the blood failed to carry enough oxygen to the tissues and this caused permanent damage to the capillaries. After this, circulation of the blood began to fail, and death was the result.

MACHINE GROUP ENCOURAGED BY 1938 ESTIMATES

Prices Moderately Mixed in Early Stock Market Dealings.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Prices were moderately mixed in today's early stock market dealings.

At a slow opening improvement was shown by Santa Fe, Johns-Manville, Standard Oil of N. J., Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, Southern Pacific and International Nickel.

Lower were Consolidated Edison, Chrysler, American Telephone, Oliver Farm, du Pont and General Motors.

Bolstering farm machinery shares were preliminary estimates of observers in this field placing 1938 production at around $700,000,000 or nearly $90,000,000 above last year's record. Prospects for spring orders were said to be excellent.

Aiding automotive issues was the assertion of President Knudsen of General Motors that he expected enough business in March to justify stepping up output.

At the beginning of foreign currency transactions sterling was off 3-16 of a cent at $5.02¼ and the French franc was up .00⅛ of a cent at 3.28¾ cents.

WORLD AWAITS HITLER'S TALK

'What Next?' Statesmen Wonder as Fuehrer Prepares For Message Tomorrow.

It also was assumed he would refer to the Feb. 4 concentration of German military power in his own hands, and indulge in a few gibes at those who had rumored his army was collapsing.

A source close to the German chancellery said Hitler would declare an amnesty for political offenders against the third reich, benefitting both Catholics and protestants who have been arrested on various political charges.

It was assumed pending trials of Catholic priests and nuns would be quashed, and there was evidence pressure already was being lifted from the Evangelical church with permission to reopen various long closed offices.

Labor Leader Urges Eden to Resign.

LONDON—(AP)—One of Britain's outstanding labor leaders urged Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden today to resign from the cabinet in defiance of any "humiliating deal" between Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy.

Herbert Morrison, former cabinet minister and secretary of the London labor party, declared Eden was "a prisoner of his reactionary colleagues" as the cabinet met in extraordinary session.

The ministers were faced with a momentous decision on British policy toward Nazification of Austria and concessions to Italy in the Mediterranean.

Even as Morrison spoke, reports reached some diplomatic quarters that Chamberlain and Eden were in sharp disagreement on Anglo-Italian policy and this was one of the issues before the cabinet.

Morrison, in his speech to the London labor party in connection with a "peace and security" campaign, accused Chamberlain of "bias" in favor of dictators.

Reports of the break between Eden and Chamberlain have been current for some time. They were denied by Eden Feb. 12 but were revived after Chamberlain's two conferences ysterday with Count Dino Grandi, the Italian ambassador.

STAR WITNESS UNDER GUARD

Given Escorts After Baring 'Proof' Davey Received $25,000 'Fee.'

Demands Cross-Quiz.

The senate was expected today to decide on Gov. Davey's request that his attorney be permitted to cross-examine Bradley next week and that the committee allow the governor to present rebuttal witnesses and testimony.

In a letter to Sen. Seidner, Gov. Davey charged that the inquiry was "inspired, directed and run by the Scripps-Howard newspapers, whose motives have been most immoral and indefensible."

"Inasmuch as your committee has accepted without restraint the perjured and slanderous testimony of one, Lee Bradley, reflecting in most disreputable manner on my good name and the integrity of the governor's office, and inasmuch as wide publicity has been given to his libelous falsehoods, and inasmuch as the good faith of the senate committee has been subjected to serious question, I hereby demand, in the name of justice and fair play, that you recall said Lee Bradley as early as possible in the coming week, and subject him to the cross-examination of my attorney. I demand also that at such further hearing you permit any and all rebuttal witnesses and evidence to be submitted, in order to prove beyond the possibility of doubt that Bradley's testimony is perjured, infamous and false," the governor wrote.

The governor wrote that Bradley "has tried to sell this same alleged documentary evidence to a large number of people, at prices ranging from $10,000 up and down. No one has seen fit to give his alleged evidence any credence, until your committee picked him up and made him your own."

The committee yesterday inspected 231 exhibits furnished by Bradley, James Metzenbaum, committee counsel, said Bradley probably would be recalled to the stand on Monday.

Bradley testified he contacted Tremper through F. C. Horner, former assistant to the president of General Motors. He said Horner referred him to Paul W. Seiler of the General Motors Truck corporation and arranged the con-York.

Asked the purpose of the conference, Bradley replied:

"Through some source we were led to believe that Ohio bought a million dollars worth of cars, trucks and parts a year. We talked the matter over and thought that General Motors was so big it could stand 50 per cent of the business.

"I was out getting campaign funds and we decided that if we delivered a half million dollars worth of business there would have to be some contributions made by any company that got that business."

5-Hour Conference.

Bradley produced a telegram and telephone message from Tremper, purporting to refer to the conference in New York. He said the conference lasted five hours.

Bradley testified that Davey told Tremper payments were to be made to Poulson," a very dear and near political friend back in Ohio who is a lawyer."

After the conference, Bradley testified, Davey said to him:

"Lee, I think you have done a pretty nice stroke of business for me today."

Bradley said he met Tremper frequently.

"I had many conferences with him," he said. "In the Biltmore hotel, in the Deshler in Columbus, in the Wheeling Club in Wheeling, W. Va., on the train from Detroit to Columbus, at Tremper's home in Birmingham, Mich., and at the office of Bruce H. Seabright, Wheeling."

Seabright, a General Motor dealer, "was selected by Mr. Tremper as the man to handle the Ohio business." Bradley told the committee.

He said this arrangement was made because under the NRA, the state had to make purchases from a dealer instead of the company.

"For nine consecutive months it is my firm belief that Martin Davey had a report from me in writing on an average of three times a week on the various contacts I had made for him, and in addition we conferred many times," Bradley said.

HEAR KITCHEN PLANNING HEAD

Architects, Builders and Real Estate Men to Meet in City Monday.

Irving W. Clark, Mansfield, manager of the kitchen planning section of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, will be the principal speaker at 6:30 p. m. Monday at a dinner meeting of the Mansfield and Ashland architects, builders and real estate men at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

I. W. Clark

The emphasis that has been placed on new home building and modernization by liberalization of the Federal Housing administration act is expected to make Clark's discussion particularly timely for the building industry.

Recent changes in the housing act extended the insurance on loans on homes costing up to $6,000 to 90 per cent and also permits the insurance of modernization loans for remodeling existing homes.

A nationally recognized authority on kitchen planning, Clark, prior to his affiliation with Westinghouse was a practicing architect. He has devoted considerable study to the step-saving kitchen and recently introduced a new "yardstick" for measuring storage requirements for residences of every size.

Other speakers at Monday's meeting will be N. E. Wooters, central district manager for new building and air conditioning at Westinghouse, and Miss Isabel Barry, educational director for the Ohio Public Service company.

Wooters will talk on "Winter Air Conditioning in Today's Home," and Miss Barry's topic will be "Modern Lighting in the Modern Home."

neer for the job. I will favor any plan that will place a qualified sewage plant engineer at the head of the plant, even if we have to go out of Mansfield to get one."

He was joined by James E. Crum, councilman-at-large, Russell D. Porch, First ward, and George Kyle, Third ard, who all voiced their opposition to continue under the present set-up.

Hits Mayor's Sales Talk.

"That was a good sales talk," Crum told the mayor, "but not quite good enough for me. And it certainly looks like we were having something shoved down our throats, with the appointment already made and legislation here to be approved tonight. I say no—I was opposed to the hiring of an inexperienced man last year—and that still goes. We must have a qualified sewage plant engineer to protect out $330,000 investment even if we have to pay him $6,000 a year."

Porch went to the defense of Crum by telling council that if they could remember, he fought the hiring of an inexperienced operator last year and was still in favor of hiring a qualified sewage engineer to operate the plant.

"I don't want to be a I-told-you-so," Porch said, "but if you will remember, I warned all of you last March, that if we hired an inexperienced engineer, we would be going through just what we are here tonight. I still say we should have a thoroughly experienced man to protect our investment."

1,000 Families Driven From Homes by Western Floods

Not That It Matters

—By JANE WILLIAMS

THE dapper columnist of Broadway, the idol friend of the New York and Paris nightclubs, came home to write, to be for a little while in the house he called home but had never lived in, to rest himself of the fame which the [illegible]

[illegible] wrote to [illegible] the writer [illegible] and [illegible] of a [illegible] street [illegible]

I have often wondered if he ever [illegible] regret [illegible] conversation [illegible] he [illegible] buy out of the world [illegible] have to [illegible]

Because the small town boy who became press agent for Flo Ziegfeld who planned Broadway with his lovely colored [illegible] glass dream colored stairs and lavender plants never really got away from Gallipolis, the corner barber shop, nor the hills where he played with his dog. He had told friends that when he walked, as he frequently did, along the banks of the Seine in Paris, he became unbearably homesick for the Ohio river, the brick sidewalks and the picket fences of his home town.

And out of those nostalgic longings he made a fortune, for they became the most popular bit of all paragraphs in his daily column.

* * *

WINCHELL was the first exponent of the personal touch in newspaper writing. He first wrote it only freely about himself, his likes and dislikes. He could write a paragraph about his pet [illegible] a dog and set fifteen million [illegible] readers to chuckling, or he could write a column about his cat and make them weep. He grew to embarrassment in writing of his wife, "my best girl" and he let the world know that she was always first in his heart.

The McIntyres accomplished what few couples can: they retained the glow of their first romance through 25 years of the closest association. From the moment he rode past her house in Gallipolis on his bicycle to show her that he could ride without touching the handlebars there never was another woman for Odd. Their friends have told me that when other women [illegible] to women, inside a pass at Odd he got red around the ears and went worrying to the side of his wife, who was never far away.

WINCHELL had a greater following than any other columnist in the world, and was the highest paid for many years. And his followers were friends. In later years he was picked at and ridiculed by lesser columnists, who yapped at him even as they followed the trail he had blazed for them and envied him his following.

His humor and his stories were the kind that were told and retold and chuckled over. A dozen quotable bits come to mind, but I still think his story about the woman across the table from him who said "Will you please pass the salt and [illegible] if it is not too [illegible] trouble" is a honey.

A FEW days after Winchell prophesied the defeat of the Democratic party at the polls in 1936 he stepped down to the broadcasting studio and [illegible] the people [illegible] Roosevelt. INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

No. 23
Deduction for Depreciation.

The revenue act provides for "a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property used in the trade or business, including a reasonable allowance for obsolescence." For convenience, such allowance usually is referred to as depreciation.

In claiming a deduction for depreciation several fundamental principles must be observed. The deduction must be confined to property actually used in trade, business, and-or profession, and to improvements on real property, other than property used by the taxpayer as his personal residence. In general, it applies to the taxpayer's capital assets — buildings, machinery, etc — the cost of which cannot be deducted as a business expense.

A lawyer, doctor, or other professional man may not charge off as a current expense the cost of a library used wholly in his profession, this being a capital expenditure and the library a capital asset; but he may deduct an allowance for depreciation based upon the useful life of the library. If part of a professional man's residence is used by him for office purposes, a proportionate amount of the depreciation sustained may be deducted based generally on the ratio of the number of rooms used for such purposes to the total number of rooms in the building. The same principle applies if a taxpayer rents to others a portion of his residence. Under such conditions, however, the taxpayer must include in his gross income the rentals received.

ROADS VACATED

Commissioners Close Two in Mifflin Township.

Richland county commissioners yesterday ordered two sections of road vacated in the Muskingum conservancy area in Mifflin township, but dismissed a petition for abandonment of part of the Butler-Newville road when property owners protested.

Meeting with county commissioners and Monroe and Worthington township trustees at the courthouse, approximately a dozen residents of the Darling settlement near Newville complained against the proposed action. To close the two and a half mile section of the road would isolate their homes, they said.

The road, which crosses the Monroe - Worthington township boundary will be flooded when the Charles Mill dam is completed, commissioners said. No further action will be taken toward vacating the road until another route is provided in the area, they indicated

Roads closed were the Lewis road and Tucker road, both in Mifflin township. Each is about one mile long.

Young Man Distrusts Sweetheart

By VIRGINIA LEE

DOUBTFUL is rather a doubtful, I mean a girl and a fellow.

In the first place the girl is seven years younger than I am. Before that man came she was fond of going to dances and night clubs, and when he first asked her to go together he was sure she would miss the sort of fun she had been accustomed to. Then she began to tell him she was tired of such things. He went with her and found she was right. She was happier at those places and truly seemed engaged.

Once during a time he had definitely asked her to marry him— and with a wedding date set— he began to suspect that she was not as much in love with him as she had been at the start. Lately she has been out with a group of young people and they have had a wonderful time. Each time she returned she was tired and cross and seems dissatisfied. When he began to speak of getting married and the date and the subject was brought up at the same time she has seemed to want to marry.

Doubtful wants to know what I think about the man's character and if he is interested in her or just a fellow pleases when he is out of work.

I see no reason why a girl should not get her fun out and about occasionally, even be out of work. It seems only fair to her, especially if they are engaged.

But your whole problem seems to simmer down to this. The girl has changed in the few months she has known Doubtful and he knows it. He fears she would not be the girl she was before she met him. He is trying to keep her from such things. He wants her and he knows she was happy and pleased when he was with her in those places and truly in love and engaged.

Once during a time he had definitely asked her to marry him— and with a wedding date set— he began to suspect that she was not as much in love with him as she had been at the start. While he was away on business

DR. ARLITT SPEAKS TO PARENT'S GROUP

Guest Speaker Discusses Relationship Between Parents, Children, Schools at Open Meeting of Hedges Association.

DR. ADA HART ARLITT, chairman of national P. T. A. council and guest speaker for the Hedges P. T. A. open meeting at St. John's church last night, chose for her topic "Parents, Children and Schools." She began by pointing out the changes in schooling and in the children themselves since the P. T. A. was first organized in 1897. Dr. Arlitt said, "A child will only learn when he is ready to learn. No pressure or help from parents will teach him until he is physically and psychologically ready."

She urged parents to visit the schools in order to be better able to understand the conditions under which the children work. She also brought out the fact that one cannot compare children for all of them are different even though they may be from the same family. An open forum discussion followed the lecture.

Preceding the lecture a dinner was served to 45 members of the association, city executive board and the P. T. A. counsel. Lawrence Miller, superintendent of schools and Dr. Arlitt were guests at the dinner. The colors used in the decorations were those of the national congress, blue and gold.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1938.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and join in the campaign to reduce reckless driving.

The "first robin" has been seen—also the second and third. So that ends that for another season.

It is unfortunate, in a way, when a condition arises in which an honest politician is called upon to prove it.

When a North Dakota town was refused federal funds with which to build a dam the town went ahead and built its own dam. Now there's an idea!

Business Man Quits, Tells Why.

A CHICAGO business man who has devoted 35 years to building up a business announces he is quitting because he is "sick and tired of high taxes."

"Taxes took the major portion of profits from my business," he said. "Why should I keep on working for the benefit of a tax collector?"

Here is something worth thinking about. It is a dilemma in which owners of various kinds of businesses all over the country find themselves as a result of complicated and extortionate taxes that have been heaped upon them by federal and state governments.

The Chicago business man referred to is in the fortunate position of being able to drop the whole thing and retire. Others are not so comfortably situated, and with many it has become a struggle for bare existence, hopeful that the future may bring some measure of relief.

Bureaucratic government, in its wild extravagances and application of visionary theories, has become an Old Man of the Sea, bearing down so heavily on the shoulders of Sindbad, the taxpayer, that the weight is fast becoming unbearable.

Lost Right to Vote.

MANY people were probably surprised by the announcement that around fourteen hundred persons who have previously registered and voted in Mansfield are now ineligible to vote on account of not having gone to the polls for the past two years.

Some of these, of course, have moved from the city in the meantime and others probably had good reasons for failing to vote for two years, but it does seem odd that almost 8 per cent of the total of registered voters should have lost eligibility in this way.

There will be plenty of time, however, before the August primaries, for re-registration by all who have lost their eligibility, and for the registration of new voters or those who have come to Mansfield and who have not registered.

Move to Stop Juvenile 'Thumbing.'

MANSFIELD has fortunately had little trouble with a form of dangerous nuisance that has been developing in some of the larger cities—the practice of children standing in the street and trying to thumb a ride to or from school.

In addition to the traffic danger involved in such practice, it should constantly be kept in mind by parents and children that it is never safe to pick up a ride with a stranger.

Commenting on police activity to stop the practice in that city, the Toledo Blade says:

"The viewpoint too much today is that the world owes everybody a living—with free auto rides thrown in.

"Perhaps boys and girls who try to hail motorists do not appreciate the impudence of their acts. It is all a part of the get-something-for-nothing attitude of the disordered times. But it is brash rudeness whether the youngsters realize it or not. Why should strangers assume responsibility for their safe transport?"

If a neighbor, or friend of the family, is driving in the direction of a school and offers a ride to a child it would be entirely proper for the child to accept—just as in the case of an adult—but parents should make sure to warn their children against soliciting, or accepting, a ride from a stranger.

Another danger is that a youthful "thumber" is too likely to grow into an adult "thumber."

End of a Cheap Curiosity.

THE Wallis Warfield museum in Baltimore has closed its doors, for the simple reason that it wasn't getting enough business to keep it going. At the height of the country's emotional spree last summer, when the ex-king married the American woman, patrons flocked to the little old boarding house and cheerfully paid $1 apiece for the privilege of gazing at a cook-stove and other articles of furniture which once belonged to the Warfield family.

The excitement waned soon. The price of admission dropped to forty cents, then twenty-five cents. At last it dropped to nothing. Nobody appeared who cared to see the relics of the Baltimore girlhood of the Duchess of Windsor.

This seems to indicate a degree of common sense in the American people. There are museums which are still visited, shrines to great men and women before which old and young stand in tribute. But with all respect to the talents and charms of the lady who just missed being a queen, there really is no reason why the household goods and the former home of Wallis Warfield should long attract paying visitors.

Military Secrets and 'Spies.'

JIUJI KASAI, member of the Japanese parliament and head of a book publishing firm who has been visiting America, has a rather sensible attitude toward the present naval race problem confronting his country. He thinks it is unwise for Japan to try to conceal her navy building program.

It is unwise because it arouses suspicions and hard feelings in countries which are not Japan's natural enemies. It allies Japan with the fascist governments that are frankly unfriendly toward the democracies. Finally, it keeps no secrets because "nowadays most powers know what is going on in other countries anyhow."

It may be that Mr. Kasai, when he gets home, will find that he has said more than the present rulers of Japan like. But it would be a good thing for the world if there were fewer naval and military secrets and fewer international spies trying to ferret them out.

McIntyre's New York Day by Day

—By O. O. McINTYRE

A FINE lawdy-do. On the day I'm invited to a spiffy dinner I wake up with a puffed eye. Everybody will, of course, believe that I haven't the slightest idea where I got it. Like fun, they will! By evening it will likely suggest a Neapolitan sunset.

In fact, there is no explanation a guy can make about a moused eye that won't cause them to titter behind their fans. Imagine how the real truth would sound! Such as this: "All I know is that I was in bed early, slept well and when I awakened there it was!"

They'd go into hysterics with that. The thing to do is dude it up with a few fancy trimmings. How would this go. "My man Parkinson looked in several times on me during the night and saw nothing untoward." I love that "untoward." I'll run through that again.

That might get over if I'd say it and let it lay. But no, when I explain anything that's a bit phoney I have to go on and on and wind up with a trilly little laugh. Like a high school girl with her first beau. I can't bark it out in a take it or leave it manner. I have to sneak in a trill.

I wonder where I picked up trilling. Not from my folk. They spoke out at meeting and you could like it, or lump it. But I have to be so dad-gasted mealy-mouthed even when it's nobody's business. Why should I have to explain to people who don't give a hoot? I've known a fellow with a wart on his nose for 30 years and not once has he offered an explanation. But if I had it, I'd have to carry along a set of blue prints.

But I'm different. No back-bone. Just a slaver-mouthed groveler. No wonder they cuff me around. If I had any sense I'd crawl back under the porch and stay there. Always in people's way, bowing and making excuses for living. What good am I to the world? I can't even stretch out for the night without some low skulking thing sneaking up and socking me in the peeper or something. Eureka! That gives me an idea for a bang up alibi. Also I can make myself something of a hero.

Fierce fight with a burglar in early dawn! There he was—make out I'm telling the dinner crowd now—silhouetted against the window in the light of the moon. I might make that "frostclear moon" to make it sound more literary. Anyway, there he was, his face masked, coat collar turned up. With a bound I leaped from bed and was on him, swaying this way and that, upsetting bric-a-brac, tearing down portiers and gripping the hand that held a blue steeled 44. Once I felt a touch of cold steel at my temple and round and round we swung—we seem to be waltzing—until I got the pistol out of range. Finally with a mighty heave, I threw him to the floor, sat on his chest until the police came. Then dusting off my hands lightly, said: "Officer, here's your man!"

That sounds pretty good at that All except explaining the shiner. I failed to do that. I know. In the struggle I crashed the edge of a door but it was nothing—business of flicking a raveling off the coat lapel! —a mere nothing. All that story lacks is a bit of love interest and it would be o. k. for Harry Burton.

Let's take a squint at the eye again. For the goodness sake, it seems to be clearing up. Maybe just too much sleep after all. I've a notion to swat myself in the glimmer anyway. Isn't that life, the cheat? No sooner do I put myself on a pedestal than somebody knocks me off. Now I'll go to the dinner and be only my poky self—sitting around like a bump on a log, watching like a hawk to see which is the right fork or spoon and getting grease dabs on my new white vest.

Yes sir, all that black eye turned out to be was the makings of a stye. How do you like that—a hero with a stye? Only Little Lord Fauntleroys have them. Pardon me madam, but I won't be able to have dessert: I must hurry home and put a milk poultice on my peeper. Just when I might be turning loose some of my charm on a visiting countess. I will be sitting up with a stye. Well, one thing is certain—there's always the river!

Loose Use of Terms Confusing To Americans

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Talking the other day with an ardent New Dealer and an ardent "anti," I listened to a remark by the "anti" to this effect:

"Well, anyway, you can't deny that the New Deal is a Fascist deal."

"I don't particularly admit it," rejoined the "pro," but I don't particularly deny it, either. It is immaterial. I am a New Dealer, whatever the New Deal is. Say you do classify it as Fascist. What of it? I believe in it. I don't know exactly what Fascism is. I doubt that you do. You use the term 'Fascist' as an epithet. It doesn't influence me a particle."

* * *

SIMILAR EPITHETS.

I overheard a similar chat about the same time between a CIO supporter and one of CIO's bitter opponents.

"Your outfit is Communistic," charged the opponent.

"So what?" said the supporter. "It's doing good work, regardless of the philosophy that you consider its doing it under. You can't prejudice me against it by calling it what you rate as an ugly name."

Parenthetically:

When John L. Lewis was launching CIO he told me that he deemed vertical unionism the best possible antidote to Communistic, Fascistic and Nazi-istic tendencies.

However the CIO spokesman I have quoted took the position that CIO-ism is all to the good. Call it anything, he still is for it.

* * *

MORE EXAMPLES.

There is a deal in this comment.

Communist! That has been a vituperative designation ever since the Russian revolution. It hasn't really meant any more than denouncing a politico-economic opponent as a "polecat." He isn't literally a "polecat" any more, maybe, than he is a Communist—but it is highly uncomplimentary to say that he is, and that's what's intended.

Ditto "Fascist" or "Nazi."

* * *

REMEMBER THIS?

I can remember when it was the "limit" to speak of a fellow American as a "Socialist."

Today it is semi-respectable to be a Socialist.

Norman Thomas (an ex-clergyman) is one.

In former days, when Herr Most (long forgotten) was prominent, the idea was that a Socialist traveled around with a smoking bomb in each hand.

Socialists and Anarchists were grouped together.

They are as far apart as the poles in their respective reasonings, but, in those times, no distinction was drawn between them.

* * *

LOOSE USE OF TERMS.

Anarchy, be it understood, is ultra-pacifistic.

Yet the "Chicago Anarchists," five at a time, were hanged in the 1890's as militant enemies of society. And Herr Most (Socialist) would have been scooped in also if he had not had an ironclad alibi.

They could not have been more absolute opposites.

Yet, in our present discussions, Communists, Fascists and Nazi-ists all are jumbled together.

Fascist-Nazi-ists versus Communists do not make this mistake. They hate one another like poison. Yet here, in the U. S. A., we mix them together.

The fact is, it is just vulgar language—and applied to all of them, by folk who haven't the slightest notion which is which, on what any one of them is shooting at.

Democracy IS different—but it doesn't know what it's talking about.

It had better find out, or it will evolve some entirely new theory.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

GOODNESS FINALLY TRIUMPHS: Why boasteth thou thyself in mischief, O mighty man? The goodness of God endureth continually.—Psalms 52:1.

Listen, World!

F. A. Griffith Batting for Elsie.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

(Note—Said scads of fans—"We could write columns, maybe better than yours, if we had the chance." So we gave them a chance to make this unique clearing house for American thought and feeling. Here's one of the results. Tell us what you think of it.)

* * *

F. A. GRIFFITH, of Los Angeles, Calif., is a brave man. Or maybe just contemplating a lil' suicide. In either case, he has handed this column the death-dealingest topic we've seen in many a day. To-wit:

What's the greatest menace in our modern life?

"FEMININE GREED," says F. A. G.

While you're gathering your firearms, girls, we'll give you the rest of the letter.

"Dear Miss Robinson—

"My work brings me in contact with many groups of intelligent men—doctors, lawyers, judges, psychologists, business men, etc. In talking freely with these men, when no women are present, various subjects evoke more or less interest. But there is one subject which always arouses instantaneous reaction, namely THE GREED OF WOMEN, and no other subject causes such bitterness and high blood pressure.

"Said a young lawyer, 'It's such a pity, because it is the one thing, more than anything else, which keeps women from being angels.' This same attorney, though brilliant, ambitious, popular and clean-living, has resigned himself to a life of single blessedness because, says he, 'there is nothing I despise more than selfishness, and most of the young women whom I know intimately are acquisitive, greedy and mercenary, although appearing to be unsophisticated on the surface.'

"Another older man, a doctor with three daughters and vast experience with women, says that 'Feminine Greed is the Curse of American Life.' These opinions are typical of 98 per cent of the men of all classes."

F. A. GRIFFITH.
Los Angeles, Calif.

Whew! And also Zowie! There's a broadside, if ever we saw one! But now let's finish friend Griffith's column for him. Is his contention true? I'm afraid it is! But there's plenty more to the story than that admission.

Any merchant will tell you that a woman will drive a sharper bargain than a man . . . be pestier over details . . . demand the most value out of every penny. Nor is this true only of American females. The housewives of the old world—French, German, Italian, Russian and English—are even keener Penny Pinchers. But why? There's a reason . . . and a plain one.

It's the woman who is the spender and saver in the home. Nine out of every ten dollars earned in the U. S. A. are invested or banked by the mothers and wives of America. Ask any great advertiser to whom he directs his printed appeal and he will say, every time—"To the women."

But is this necessarily a sign of greed? Or does it prove that woman is, at heart, a selfish, cold-blooded grabber?

IT DOES NOT!

It merely means that woman is on her job . . . performing her ancient and hereditary duty.

It is as natural and compulsory for a woman to conserve money as it is for a man to make it. As no normal man can "keep face" without working and adventuring, so no woman can run true to form unless she turns his venture into an investment.

Even when some nitwit Eve squanders her husband's hard-earned sheckles on gilded gee-gaws, she is still expressing her urge in a warped form. And this peculiar balancing of Get and Grab and Keep is one of the most marvelous and blessed contrivances of Nature. Without it, the race could not go on. It is as vital in its way as the urge to perpetuate the species.

So the next time Mabel asks you, Bill, why're you holding out that $1.23—there's the answer. She's a pest—I admit it. And a flea in the ear. But if hard times come, you and the youngsters will bless her for that itching finger.

Timely Editorial

Extreme Pacifism.

In Washington the other day a young theological student testifying before the congressional hearing on the proposed $00 million dollar naval program said that in event of war he would not bear arms in defense of his mother and sister.

It is this sort of immoderate extreme attitude which makes the position of the reasonable, conscientious lover of peace more difficult.

The truth is, of course, that the overwhelming majority of Americans are pacifists in the sense that they don't want war, are fully aware of its futilities and its grim realities, and would be reluctant to shoulder a gun and march away to a possible death or terrible disabling injuries.

But they are also sensible about it. If it came to a choice between defending their loved ones against the aggression of a foreign invader and remaining inactive in compliance with what this young man wrongfully believes to be a high principle, they would fight, as Americans always have done, in defense of their homes and families.—Columbus Dispatch.

WORDS OF THE WISE

It is not strength, but art, obtains the prize, and to be swift is less than to be wise.—Homer.

Avoid greatness: in a cottage there may be found more real happiness than kings or their favorites enjoy in palaces.—Horace.

What One Man Thinks

—By DAVID GIBSON

Morals get lower with higher economic pressure.

Nobody is changed in their belief by being abused for it.

Those of us who are old and realize it, have a certain advantage over some who are younger—in years.

High ground-rent and taxes in the retail districts of great cities are the graveyards of small merchants.

To the hungry man, willing to work, it is no crime to steal food—the act is clearly one of social or public economic responsibility.

No Hopes.

THERE was one other depression over the entire face of the earth and at the same time—the Dark Ages, and they lasted for more than 1000 years.

Even the most intelligent and best educated men of any age have not done any fundametal thinking or acted upon an evil social state—not until they experience absolute and dramatic disaster—otherwise there seem to be no hopes.

Thirty-four railroad presidents held a meeting recently in Washington. For an hour and a half they discussed whether one or two cups of coffee should be served in dining cars.

Last week in Cleveland there was a joint meeting of the directors of several charitable organizations.

The entire time of this meeting was taken up in the discussion of one colored family of eight children that had been on relief for 13 years. The mother was a kind of Scarlet Sister Mary—all the children, she thought, were by different fathers.

All of the children were mentally below par—one so much that it had to be tied to a stove leg.

The only conclusion of this meeting was that this stove-leg child would soon be old enough to get out and commit a misdemeanor so that it could legally be placed in an institution.

At the annual meeting of this same group of directors last year, the entire session was devoted to a discussion as to whether the visiting nurses should wear one or two-piece uniforms.

No hopes!

The Scotch.

WITH the exception of Abraham Lincoln, there are more monuments to Robert Burns than any man who trod this earth since the Christian era.

His line: "A man's a man for all that," is known in every language of every country where there is the least democratic tendency in the rights of human beings.

The reason for so many monuments to Robert Burns and the quotation of his great poetic line, is that the Scotch have just about covered the civilized world, either individually or in groups, wherever there is industrial or commercial activity.

And they have been decidedly a good influence wherever they have gone; they have taken their poetry and song with them and retained them; they are enterprising, quick to see opportunity; they are industrious and thrifty.

They are not stingy; they spend nothing in vain display; they insist upon their equitable rights and are more than willing to extend these same rights to others.

They are investors—not gamblers!

They are the best honest business men in the world!

The Scotch control the insurance and paper mill industry of the world and are fast getting control of the English merchant marine and the wool trade.

They invented the currency system of money and the stock exchange system.

All the great economists were Scotchmen, including Adam Smith, Patrick Edwars Dove and John Stewart Mill.

James Watt, the inventor of the steam engine, 1767, was a Scotchman, and which has meant more to civilization than any other invention; for it put another economic phase over the entire face of the earth.

Henrietta.

ALL of us human beings can learn more about how to win friends and influence people by a study of Henrietta, the Hollenden Hotel cat, Cleveland, than by reading a certain now best-selling book of that title.

So far as birth and very early training is concerned, Henrietta is just plain cat, save that she is a bit bulky by reason of a plentitude of food to her liking and to a May West-waddle in her slow walk.

Henrietta has the freedom of the whole institution, public, social and working parts and is in the good graces of everybody, including most of the transient and regular guests, employes and management—she takes her afternoon nap in an upholstered chair of the managing director's office—Theodore De Witt.

Cats are more of a success as public pets, say, about a hotel, than dogs; guests feed sweets to dogs, particularly lumps of sugar; they become over-fat to halitosis and B. O., mixed, and soon nobody loves them.

A cat will eat only what it needs, what is healthful in quantity and variety—it is a good deal like a mule as compared to a horse in this regard.

And here is where my younger readers can "date" me, and where I display my farm background and early city-livery-stable education—I know all about hosses and mules.

Henrietta makes regular and frequent visits to the apartments of the permanent hotel residents and usually enjoys a 40-cent can of sardines, delivered and opened by a room service waiter, but—she carefully and knowingly avoids all those not friendly to cat-kind.

Both cats and dogs, with their keen sense of smell, can instinctively detect their friends or enemies among human-kind—to them there are friendly and unfriendly odors.

About a year ago Henrietta gave birth to five kittens in an open cupboard under the cashier's desk of one of the rear restaurants. A boss waitress thought that Henrietta and her family would be safer and more comfortable in the basement, to where they were removed. Henrietta disagreed with her—carried all her babies, one by one, by the napes of their necks, back to the cupboard under the cashier's desk, where they remained on private view to all their friends until they were old enough to scamper about and when they were distributed among the help and favored guests who had a certain sentiment association with their mother.

It seems to be an instinct of the mothers of all multiple-birth animals that have been removed to return them to the place where they were whelped.

Henrietta has a clown-like upturn to the corners of her mouth and an absolute twinkle to her eye.

And, I have never known a man or woman with a twinkle to their eye that were not good salesmen or saleswomen.

Henrietta does a fine job of selling herself to all her human contacts—by her gentle ways and affectionate disposition, and in instinctively keeping away from her enemies.

If Henrietta's admirable qualities were embodied in us human beings, why, they would be akin to genius.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS

No man can succeed unless he has faith in his own ability.

People who borrow trouble are always anxious to turn it over to others.

When two women go shopping they are likely to buy things just to show each other that they have money.

Don't wait for great opportunities. A long, continuous walk will get you over more ground than a short run will.

Everyday Poems

Peripatetic.

"I can think better when I walk,"
He said, not new at all:
A school of ancient sages walked
Old wisdom to recall.

New visions to bring to their minds,
And problems to define;
Their thinking with their walking, they
Found pleasant to combine.

Peripatetic, it was called,
This ancient school of thought,
That filled a need and to the store
Of wisdom, treasure brought.
